Hiss Linked To Spy Paper Typewriter, Probers Say

Identification Made From Insurance Letters; 4 Accused Of Taking Red Gifts

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A typewriter on which State Department documents were copied for a Soviet courier has been linked "definitely" to Alger Hiss, former State official, the House Committee on Un-American Activities said yesterday.

Acting Chairman Mundt (R., S. Dak.) told reporters the committee had in its possession letters addressed to an insurance firm and signed by Hiss. These letters, he said, have been "definitely identified" as coming from the typewriter on which secret official documents were copied or summarized.

The documents were turned over to the committee last month by Whittaker Chambers, former courier for a Red "apparatus" in this country who was to transmit them to Soviet agents. Chambers testified that he received them from Hiss, a charge Hiss repeatedly denied.

Papers Delivered 52 Times

Mundt said Chambers told the committee in a five-hour session Tuesday that he had received pilfered documents "at least" 52 times in slightly more than a year during the late 1930's. Chambers told the committee, Mundt said, that he had received such documents almost weekly during his activity as a courier and that most of them eventually were delivered to Soviet agents in the United States.

Mundt's statement was in connection with release of a committee report to the House which warned that "there are Communists in Government today" and that Russian desire for information is stronger now than before the war.

"Apparatus" Continued

The report said:

"The evidence clearly indicates that the Chambers apparatus continued to function for at least one year after he broke away (in 1939) and it has now been clearly established that at least four of the individuals who were acting in the Communist apparatus were also acting as late as 1945 in the parallel apparatus exposed to this committee by Elizabeth Bentley in the fall of 1948.

"We have no evidence to indicate that the operations of this second apparatus do not continue to the present time."

The committee reported that it had evidence linking Soviet spy rings with individuals in the Government and detailing how they operated. But it was holding this back, it said, "so as not to interfere in the present investigation of the Federal grand jury on espionage now convened in New York City."

Among this evidence, the committee said, is an explanation of the manner in which one Colonel

Long-Term Plan Adopted

Europe's Report to ECA Asks 4.3 Billion in Aid for 1949-50

Paris, Dec. 30 (NYHT).—Europe's case for continuation of the Marshall Plan beyond its first year was completed here today and will be sent to the United States.

The Organization for European Economic Cooperation approved a request for $4,330,000,000 in American aid for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and adopted a progress report on its long-term recovery plans, which is intended to show the Economic Cooperation Administration what is to be done the four years ending in June, 1952.

Although neither of the papers approved by the OEEC is final, the two will form the basis of ECA's request to Congress for the further appropriations needed for the European Recovery Program after next June 30.

A European delegation consisting of Robert Marjolin of France, OEEC'S secretary general; Sir Edmund Hall-Pach of Britain, chairman of the executive committee, and Baron Snoy of Belgium, head of the OEEC'S governing council, will leave for Washington this weekend to help ECA officials prepare the appropriation request to Congress.

In terms of greater production, more trade and less dependence on aid from the United States, both next year's plan and the long-term report show steady progress toward recovery. But both point out that Europe cannot be financially self-sufficient even after four years of ERP and despite harder work and more sacrifice.

The long-term report contains all of the 19 national four-year recovery plans and an analysis. No attempt has yet been made to combine the individual programs in one master plan.

Instead, the OEEC has informed the United States that the ERP area may expect to have a deficit of some $2,500,000,000 in the fiscal year 1953, when it had hoped to be solvent.

The report suggests two courses of action to overcome the prospective deficit. An effort may be undertaken now to economize, reduce imports from the rest of the world and live within the limited means Europe can reasonably expect to have available; or, in coordinating the 19 plans, the OEEC can look for ways to increase cooperation and trade between ERP countries that will reduce dependence on the rest of the world.

A master recovery program probably will not be ready for another four or five months.

Next year's program will not be put in finished form until the money to finance it actually has been appropriated by the Congress.

An analysis shows the 19 Marshall Plan members plan to spend 6,326,000,000 in dollars on imports during 1949-50 against $6,340,000,000 this year. More than a third will be spent on food. Petroleum and cotton are the other big purchases.

Food and tobacco worth $2,446,000,000 will be bought with dollars. Bread grains alone will cost $1,-

Chiang to Get No New Aid, Official Says

Truman Won't Ask More Funds Until Generalissimo Quits, High Source States

By the United Press

A high Government official said last night President Truman has decided not to ask Congress for any new economic or military aid to China until Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek resigns.

The official, who declined to be quoted by name, said no provision for aid to the hard-pressed Chinese Nationalist government will be made in the 1950 fiscal year budget which Mr. Truman will send to Congress next week or the week after.

State Department Spokesman Michael J. McDermott, informed of the report, promptly denied that the United States is cutting off aid to China.

He said "the Chiang Kai-shek government is getting aid daily" under the 125 million dollar military assistance program voted by the last Congress.

The State Department statement, however, was concerned entirely with continuation of the already existing aid program, most of which already has been obligated.

The high Government official gave no indication that Mr. Truman intends to halt aid going to China under the previously approved program.

He said emphatically, however, that unless there is a change in the Chinese government before the present program is exhausted, the Administration will let it run out.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek came here several weeks ago to appeal for aid but it was understood United States officials refused her any commitments. She is still in the Capital.

Last night's statement was the first word the White House was marking time to await the replacement of Chiang.

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman announced last week that American economic aid to China would be continued even if the present government fell—provided the new government was a democratic one.

Name on Criminal List Changed Chiang's Mind

Nanking, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Communists' "war criminals" list was reported today to have caused Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to determine angrily to continue the Chinese civil war.

The report, unconfirmed but generally circulated among informed circles in this capital, was to this effect:

Advisers finally had persuaded Chiang on Christmas Day that he must retire and let someone else try to negotiate peace with the dominant Communists.

Means of arranging this were being considered when the Communists broadcast a list of 45 government leaders they intended to punish as "war criminals." Chiang's name was at the top, and Madame Chiang's was on it, too.

"The generalissimo was very angry and there was an immediate change of mind," a Chinese source said.

It was confirmed officially that Chiang had called his government chieftains and field commanders in for meetings.

Asked to comment on report that Vice President Li Tsung-jen was among the advocates of a negotiated peace Shen replied:

"I met the Vice President this morning. When told of this report, he was much surprised, saying, 'I share the same thought entertained by President Chiang.'"

In his last public statement, November 8, Chiang vowed to continue the war and urged his followers to prepare for eight more years of fighting.

$450,000 Excess Charges Alleged by OHE; Contractors Told to Make Good

Former GI home-owners have been "gypped out of" $450,000 by 19 District builders, it was alleged yesterday by Joseph Bernard of the compliance division of the Office of the Housing Expediter.

Complaints against the builders have been issued by Bernard, ordering them to refund the money, correct the faulty construction, or face criminal and civil prosecution by the Department of Justice.

Builders have 10 days to answer the complaints. Other refunds have been collected from between 15 and 20 builders since August, Bernard said.

The $450,000 represents actual overcharges, substitution of inferior materials, or omissions of part of the specifications in houses constructed under the GI Bill of Rights, Bernard said.

Builders' Names Withheld

He would not give the names of the contractors involved.

Bernard said his division was actively investigating 2000 complaints in the Washington area at present, in addition to 2200 in the Baltimore area, and 600 in Virginia, the three areas under his jurisdiction.

Bernard listed the following as typical violations which constituted the $450,000 figure:

Occupancy charges, where the builder charges the veteran rent during the period after the house is completed and before his GI loan is approved; violations of the sales agreements; boosted appraisal fees; omission of walks, curbs, refrigerators, windows and even rooms called for by the specifications; substitution of poplar instead of oak floors prescribed in the plans; 20 for 30-gallon fuel tanks; two instead of six electrical outlets; smaller windows instead of large ones, and linoleum instead of tile in bathrooms.

13 Investigators at Work

Bernard said he had 13 experienced investigators inspecting the three-State area, using cameras, making laboratory tests, and in some cases actually digging.

A common violation involves failure to install "parging," an insulation under cement basement floors to prevent leaking. He said his investigators on several occasions had dug through cement floors to prove the parging had not been installed as required.

Failure to insulate outside walls, as required by plans, is also a common violation, Bernard said, and raises monthly operating costs for former GI homeowners approximately 50 per cent during the winter months.

"We are not crusading," Bernard emphasized, "just trying to give the veteran an even break."

Lodge Is Supported By Group Fighting Change in Party's 4-Year Limitation

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A band of Senate GOP insurgents with the announced purpose of "rebuilding" the Republican party yesterday flatly opposed reelection of Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio) as chairman of the party's Senate steering committee.

At a meeting called by Senator Irving M. Ives (N. Y.) they got behind Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (Mass.), for the top Senate GOP office.

To stop Taft, they agreed to fight a proposed change in the party's Senate rules that would make Taft eligible for the office for another four years.

Twelve Senators, chiefly representing the party's so-called liberal wing, attended the meeting. Ives said it was the consensus that the post should go to Lodge instead of Taft, though no formal vote was taken.

Candidacy Announced

Less than three hours earlier, Taft had formally announced he will be a candidate to succeed himself when the full Senate Republican membership meets Monday to organize for the session. He said he will support a rules change making his reelection possible.

Ives said the move was not aimed at Taft "personally" but at his leadership of the party for another four years. He said the party was "not going forward" under Taft.

Ives described Lodge as representative of "the more modern Republican philosophy—of what might be called the moving forces in the party."

The long developing battle over the Senate Republican leadership broke into the open as the GOP Eightieth Congress prepared to bow out of control at a brief swansong session today.

Sabath Leads Rules Move

There were these other developments as Democrats worked like beavers on plans for organizing the new Eighty-first Congress, convening Monday noon:

1. Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), with reported leadership backing, announced that he personally will move Monday to curb the power of his own Rules Committee to "pigeonhole" legislation. Sabath said he will offer a resolution permitting as few as 100 members to sign petitions discharging the Rules group from consideration of any regularly reported bill held up 30 days.

2. President Truman told newsmen his opening message on January 5 will touch on almost every point of his broad program but will be fairly general in terms. He will supply more detail in his economic report and in his budget message a few days later. He disclosed for the first time that he plans a special message later on international policy.

3. "Big Four" Democratic leaders were invited to the White House for a preview of his plans in advance of a Senate Democratic caucus today and organization of House Democrats Saturday. Invited were Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley (Ky.), Senator Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), slated to be Senate Democratic floor leader; Speaker-to-be Sam Rayburn (Tex.) and Representative John W. Mc-

Truman Stands Pat on View Some Top Reds Seek Accord

Red Dean Says All Top Men in Moscow Are Against War

Canterbury, England, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—The "Red Dean" of Canterbury, who knows all the members of the Russian Politburo personally, said today he was not puzzled by President Truman's statement that the western nations have friends in the Kremlin.

"Obviously," Dr. Hewlett Johnson said, "the President was referring to the fact that Russian leaders in their approach to peace feel pretty much the way Western leaders do.

"Some of them I know advocate a 'get tough with the West' policy. Others are in favor of continued, even if fruitless, negotiations.

"But no one in Russia—and I say this without qualification—wants war.

"I've been worried that some incident such as Berlin might provoke war despite the peaceful intentions of the Russians," he admitted. "But I feel that the danger has lessened somewhat recently. Incidentally, if the West fights the East, it will be the most appalling, long and bloody war the world has ever seen."

Johnson said he had spent three months in Russia since the war and that "as a trained engineer" he could see the Russians immensely strong and growing stronger.

"If there is war, we must think in terms of 200 million Russians, 100 million other eastern Europeans and 200 million to 300 million Chinese," he said. "Partisan armies will spring up all over Europe. Even Tito will be right there alongside Russia."

President Gets Laugh From Report Barkley Is Diplomatic Envoy

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman stood pat yesterday on his statement that certain Russian leaders are anxious to reach an understanding with the United States.

Asked at a White House news conference to clarify what he said in Kansas City Monday, Mr. Truman said that it could not be clarified—that he made the statement just as plainly as he could. It was, he said, a statement of fact.

"There is a report," a newsman said, "to the effect that Vice President-elect Barkley may have carried some special credentials from you and may have met with a Soviet representative in Europe, the purpose being to lay the groundwork for some negotiations for rapprochment between the East and the West. Do you have any comment?"

Denies Barkley Rumor

The Chief Executive, saying this was not so, laughed and observed that it was remarkable how far speculation could go.

"It was suggested," the reporter persisted, "that he (Barkley) might have met with Litvinov, and it was right after that that you said that some people in the Soviet government wanted a closer understanding with us."

Mr. Truman, remarking again on on the extent to which speculation can go, told the reporters to keep on speculating. He said it was good.

In discussing his Kansas City statement about certain Russian leaders who wanted an understanding with the United States, the President insisted that he had said the same thing before, time and again.

"It's not new?" he was asked.

Not so far as he was concerned, Mr. Truman said.

No Emphasis Meant

He was asked if this referred back to what he said in Eugene, Oreg., last June. ("I like old Joe (Stalin). He's a decent fellow, but he's a prisoner of the Politburo.")

Mr. Truman smiled and said there was no connection whatever.

A reporter wanted to know whether, in his Kansas City speech, he intended to emphasize the fact that some Russian leaders are friendly to this country or the fact that Russia does not live up to her commitments.

Mr. Truman said that both statements were correct, and that he was not trying to emphasize either. The speech, he said, was a

ABC Board To Reassess Testimony

Chairman 'Wonders' About Police Evidence After Recent Case

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The question of how much confidence to place in the testimony of District policemen will be discussed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board early next week, Chairman Alan W. Payne disclosed last night.

The action followed the disclosure by The Washington Post yesterday of statements made at a closed meeting of the District Commissioners which reflected on the veracity of two policemen, who appeared as major prosecution and defense witnesses in the controversial Mitchell's Grill case.

The city heads dismissed 41 charges against the cafe after holding two closed hearings on an appeal by Henry G. David, owner of the grill at 235 G st. nw., from a 53-day suspension by the ABC board.

Payne said he had given much thought to the problem "since these things came up" in the Mitchell's Grill case.

"For the most part, in the past, the board has usually had great confidence in police testimony. This case, frankly, has left me in the position of wondering how much confidence can be placed in the testimony of some of the policemen," he explained.

On the other hand, he emphasized, "I have a high opinion of the police force and consider its members are doing a good job. I don't think our confidence should be shaken in the entire force."

Payne has been confined to his home recovering from a leg and back injury, but he said last night he expected to meet with the other two board members "early next week" to "discuss how much confidence to place in police testimony in the future."

The ABC head recalled that some time ago the Board wrote to the Police Department requesting that policemen on cases involving violations of ABC laws try to obtain names and addresses of witnesses in order to corroborate their own testimony. An order to this effect was subsequently issued.

Payne said that in the grill case he gave additional weight to the testimony of Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace, chief prosecution witness.

North Korea Is Evacuated, Tass Reports

Final Move Christmas Beat Soviet Deadline By 6 Days, Agency Says

London, Friday, Dec. 31 (U.P.).—Russia completed the evacuation of its occupation forces from North Korea on Christmas Day, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

Left behind, however, was a Communist-dominated, Kremlin-recognized North Korean "People's Democratic" regime with a well-schooled army and police force of its own.

Tass said the evacuation, which began in September, was completed six days ahead of the midnight December 31 deadline set by the Russians themselves.

By wartime agreement, Russia occupied the industrial northern half of Korea, while United States forces moved into the agricultural zone, south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

United States withdrawal will begin soon, but total evacuation has been postponed at the request of South Korean leaders who fear that their own army and police force could not cope yet with Communist-inspired disorders or with a possible full-scale invasion from the north.

The United States Army announced in Washington Tuesday night that it was withdrawing the Seventh Infantry Division from Korea in accordance with an agreement with Russia to evacuate all troops "as early as practicable."

No date had been set for the withdrawal. The Sixth Infantry Division and some United States service troops would remain in Korea, the Army said.

The United Nations has ruled that the United States-sponsored government in south Korea is the legal government of all Korea. The south Korean government was elected under U. N. supervision last May. The north Koreans boycotted the election.

4 Million Loan Granted to Haiti

A four million dollar loan to the Republic of Haiti was announced yesterday by the Government-owned Export-Import Bank.

The money will help finance construction of flood control, irrigation and drainage works in the Artibonite Valley, a now useless land area.

Red Cross Asks For Blood, With Supplies at 20%

With only about 20 per cent of its normal blood supplies on hand, the District Red Cross yesterday urged that as many persons as possible go to the blood center today, New Year's Eve, and make a blood donation.

Dr. Kenneth R. Nelson, physician in charge of the center, said that stocks of several types of blood are low, and that some are entirely depleted. "We have not had to refuse requests yet, but we certainly do not like to have the supplies run so low in the face of the usual number of New Year's Eve and New Year's Day casualties," Dr. Nelson said.

The blood center will keep its usual hours today, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Persons desiring to donate a pint of blood may either call District 5042 for an appointment, or go to the center, 1730 E st. nw.

Religious Classes in Arlington Schools May Get Court Test

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

A court test of Arlington's right to give "religious instruction" in its public schools may be made by a new county group, "if other methods fail."

The two-week-old organization is called the "Provisional Committee for Separation of Church and School."

Its chairman, L. D. MacIntyre, of 3362-B S. Wakefield st., Arlington, says the group wants the Arlington School Board to comply with last March's Supreme Court decision outlawing religious classes in public schools.

First step, MacIntyre said, will be a direct appeal to the school board early next year. If that fails, he added, "we will go as far as necessary." He said that may mean a court test.

The extent of religious instruction in Arlington public schools was sketched yesterday by Charles J. Walsh, assistant school superintendent.

Instruction is provided by three teachers who draw their salaries from the Arlington Council of Religious Education, which is composed of and supported by various Protestant churches in the county.

These three, full-time teachers cover 18 of Arlington's elementary schools with the Bible as their only textbook. Instruction covers the New and Old Testaments.

Classes are held for fourth, fifth, and sixth grade students on a voluntary basis for one hour once a

Feat May Harness Virus

New Chemical Test to Speed Research for Cold Preventive

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Public Health Service scientists here have found a chemical way to test both presence and potency of the common cold virus, it was reported today.

Significance of the feat, they explained, is that it will speed their research for a cure or immunizing agent against man's age-old enemy, the common cold.

The findings were published officially in today's issue of Science, weekly publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

It marked the first published progress report of the research project since December, 1947, when successful isolation of the suspect virus was first announced by Drs. Norman H. Topping and Leon T. Atlas, of PHS's Bureau of Infectious diseases, at Bethesda, Md.

The new test, a complex color reaction technique, is used on laboratory cultures of MR-1 virus (minor respiratory virus) to show their degree of infectiousness, it was explained in a pre-announcement press conference by Dr. Atlas and his co-worker, Dr. George A. Hottle. Dr. Topping was recently promoted to assistant surgeon general of Public Health Service.

With the chemical tests, said Dr. Atlas, the known drugs and their compounds can be tried in rapid-fire order to determine which, if any, can subdue the virus that periodically lays man low. Heretofore, he said, it was necessary to test the laboratory cultures on human volunteers.

There were times during the past year, he said, that the scientists "almost lost" the virus strain they had worked so hard to isolate.

The virus was originally isolated in fluids from fertile hen eggs which had been inoculated with the nasal washings from human volunteers from the D. C. Reformatory for Men at Lorton, Va.

Although one of the goals of the research is to find an immunizing vaccine against colds, said Dr. Atlas, "the importance of vaccines is too often overemphasized."

"The use of vaccines in many diseases has not been encouraging," he declared. Specifically, he named influenza vaccines as among those found disappointing as true immunizing agents.

Dr. Atlas said top priority in the continuing research will be given to testing the new anti-

Japs Given Right To Display Flag; Recovery Praised

Tokyo (Friday), Dec. 31 (AP).—General MacArthur granted the Japanese permission today to display their national flag without restriction as "a shining beacon" for the rebuilding of Japan.

MacArthur issued a New Year's message to the Japanese praising them for their progress since the surrender but warning them they must do more.

MacArthur also declared the national elections called for January 23 "will test your wisdom in selecting a leadership to whom you will in this crucial period entrust the sovereign power."

Kensington Man Killed by Shotgun After Suicide 'Jest'

Robert LeRoy Norris, 23, of Route No. 3, Kensington, Md., was killed last night when a .16 gauge shotgun went off as he stood by his brother's porch on Newport Mill rd.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County coroner, said Norris a short time earlier had been involved in a traffic accident near Silver Spring in which he was charged with reckless driving.

Norris then had gone to the home of his brother, Lewis Norris, the coroner said, and after discussing the accident had remarked casually: "I think I'll go home and kill myself."

The coroner said the brother, Lewis Norris, thinking he was jesting, replied: "Why go home? There is a shotgun in the next room." A few minutes later, the brother heard a shot on the porch and found Robert dying, the coroner said.

Hungarians Excommunicated

Church Bans All Connected With Mindszenty's Arrest

Vatican City, Dec. 30 (AP).—All Roman Catholics connected with the arrest of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary were excommunicated today. The punishment is one of the most severe in church law.

The Sacred Consistorial Congregation of the Vatican took the action in a decree dated December 28 and published today. Pronounced under provisions of canon law reserved to the Apostolic See, the offense can be forgiven only by the Holy See itself.

Hungary's Communist-dominated government announced the arrest of the 56-year-old cardinal last Monday on suspicion of plotting against the government, spying, treason and black market money dealings. Thirteen others also are held.

Excommunication cuts off members of the church from all sacraments, public services and prayers of the church, from Catholic burial and social contacts with the faithful.

Excommunication is surpassed in church penalties only by the pronouncement of "anathema"—an ecclesiastical curse.

The decree of excommunication said the persons who dared "to lay hands sacrilegiously" upon the cardinal have fallen under "infamia juris"—the infamy of the law. This means that in the eyes of the church the offenders are involved in a crime on a level with rape, heresy and simony, the illicit traffic in sacred things.

The Catholic Church also excommunicated all who had anything to

Soviet Cuts Trade With Tito to 1-8th Of 1948 Figure

London, (Friday) Dec. 31 (U.P.).—Russia will deliver only one-eighth as much goods to Yugoslavia in 1949 as it did in 1948 because of Premier Marshal Tito's anti-Soviet attitude, the Soviet news agency Tass reported tonight.

Tass said the trade protocol for 1949 was signed December 27 by the Russian ministry of foreign trade and the Yugoslav trade delegation.

"In view of the unfriendly policy of the Yugoslav government towards the Soviet Union, a policy which made it impossible to preserve the widespread economic cooperation between the USSR and Yugoslavia, the protocol provides for a decrease in the exchange of goods between the USSR and Yugoslavia in 1949 by eight times as compared with that in 1948," Tass said.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Rep. F. Edward Hebert Is a Bear 3 Ways: In His Name, His Physique, and for Work

The "headline happy" tactics of certain of his associates on the House Committee on Un-American Activities arouse the city editor sensibilities within the breast of Representative F. Edward Hebert (pronounced A-Bear), Louisiana Democrat (pronounced Dixiecrat).

Every now and then Hebert, a bear of a man, lets out a bellow in the direction of the GOP side of the committee. Too much headline hunting, not enough reporting, booms the one-time New Orleans newspaperman.

There are those who slyly suggest that the Louisianan is himself adept at not only writing headlines, but getting into them as well. Hebert has too much printer's ink in his blood and too much political savvy in his head to deny such an insinuation. But he will insist that as editor or Congressman, he backs up the headlines with facts.

REP. F. EDWARD HEBERT
(Pronounced A-Bear)

Was Political Columnist

As sports writer, political columnist and city editor, Eddie Hebert had a hand in the making of many a headline of the New Orleans States and Times-Picayune. He and the States staff uncovered the notorious "Louisiana Scandals" of the late thirties which sent a flock of Louisiana officials, remnants of the Huey Long machine, to prison.

Before taking over as city editor in '37, Hebert for nine years banged out "Periscope," a page one political column. It is likely that the 6-feet-2, brawny-built Congressman is the only ex-political writer in the House. As a rule, politicial writers are much too cynical a breed to plunge into the swirling waters of politics.

Though a foe of Huey Long, Herbert was a good friend of Jim Noe, one of Huey's closest associates. It was Jim who, breakng with the machine fed Hebert the tips which led to the stories that exposed the "Louisiana Scandals."

It was at the insistent urging of Noe that the crusading city editor ran for Congress, and was first elected in 1940. He's been re-elected since.

At Peace With Longs

Hebert will have you understand that he came to Congress without being either a Noe man or a yes man. He was backed by the Jones' reform movement and the regular Democrats as well as the Noe independents. Nowadays, Hebert is a regular Democrat (which in New Orleans is a States' righter), and is at peace with Gov. Earl Long, Huey's brother, whom he once fought, and with Senator Russell Long, Huey's son, whom he knew as a knee-high kid.

The editor-turned-legislator did an odd thing on coming to Washington. He asked for assignment to the House District Affairs Committee, which though important to running the local government here, is hardly good for votes down in New Orleans. As a freshman, Hebert figured he'd get slim pickings on a major committee, preferred action on a smaller one.

Representative Hebert served seven years with House District Affairs Committee. In that period he initiated an investgation of the Metropolitan Police Department which led to an organization shake-up; he probed condtions at the District Jail and sponsored a law setting up a separate corrections department; he pushed a series of bills improving criminal justice administration, and launched the legislation which resulted in the establishment of the District alcoholic clinic. He opposed local suffrage.

Meanwhile, he also served on the Naval Affairs Committee, and in '44 hit the headlines for his role in the investigation of the Brewster Plane-Production Co. Under cross-examination by Hebert, the plant's union leader admitted to perjury and was later convicted of it.

Currently, Hebert is a member of the committee on Un-American Activities, which he joined a year ago, and the Armed Services Committee. Hebert opposed the armed forces unification legislation, confesses to being a "big Navy" champion.

For many years Hebert has been blind in the left eye. In recent years, a cataract has progressively diminished the sight of the right eye, so that he's had to give up driving, and smoking while reading. The takes his handicap in stride, looks forward to an operation to restore at least one-eye sight.

New Orleans born (in 1901) and raised, Felix Edward Hebert attended Tulane U., where he was student manager of the football team. Always an avid sports fan, he used to attend sports events here until his eyes gave out.

The reporter-become-Representative lives with his wife and 12-year-old daughter, Dawn, on Duke st. extended just outside of Alexandria in Fairfax County. Always the optimist, Hebert bought the brick house during his first term.

Dawn was named after her father. "She was born when I was working on the city desk and used to get home just before daybreak," Hebert explains.

Hebert Brands GOP Probers Publicity Mad

By The Associated Press

Representative Hebert (D., La.) accused the Republican leaders of the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday of suffering from "publicity mania."

Hebert, a committee member, got out a formal statement taking his colleagues to task for what he called "a hysteria for newspaper headlines." He said that has hurt the committee and given ammunition to its critics.

"Headline happiness is the biggest obstacle to the committee," he said.

The statement named no names, but Hebert, talking with reporters, said he was thinking chiefly of Representatives Mundt (D., S. Dak.), acting committee chairman, and Nixon (R., Calif.).

In his statement, Hebert noted that two committee members (Mundt and Nixon) recently proposed a set of new committee rules designed among other things to afford greater protection to accused persons.

"It is rather peculiar," Hebert said, "that two members of the committee who have been such well known transgressors of the principles from which these rules and regulations rise should now appear in public as champions of the procedure.

"All the rules and all the regulations which the committee might adopt are not worth a tinker's dam if some members of the committee fail to practice what they preach, and admonish others 'to do as I say, and not as I do.'"

Cites Condon, Duggan

Hebert said criticism of the committee because of the handling of the Dr. Edward U. Condon and the Laurence Duggan cases should be directed "against certain individual members of the committee who were responsible."

The reference was to issuance last year of a subcommittee statement labeling Dr. Condon, head of the Bureau of Standards, as a weak link in the Nation's chain of atomic security, and to Mundt's announcement that Duggan's name had cropped up in committee testimony.

Condon has not been given a hearing by the committee, but has requested one. He and associates have called the subcommittee report false.

Duggan recently met a violent death in New York.

"The tragedy is that Mr. Duggan can never have his day in court," Hebert said.

Mundt Quits House To Become Senator

Representative Mundt (R., S. Dak.) yesterday submitted his resignation, effective at midnight. At 12:01 a. m. today, he became a Senator.

Mundt was appointed to the Senate December 27 by Gov. George T. Mickelson of South Dakota to fill the vacancy created by resignation of Senator Vera C. Bushfield, widow of the late Senator Harlan J. Bushfield.

The South Dakotan was elected to a full Senate term November 2. His appointment to the post in the final days of the Eightieth Congress was designed to give him a seniority edge over freshman Senators.

Committee Tells Congress How to Improve Procedure

The National Committee for Strengthening Congress yesterday called on the incoming Eighty-first Congress to put its houses in order by abolishing seniority rights, filibusters and Rules Committee "vetoes."

The committee laid down a four-point "reform" program in letters addressed to all members of the new Congress which convenes Monday.

The proposals were drafted by Committee Chairman Robert Heller, Cleveland industrial engineer. Heller's 1944 studies of congressional machinery paved the way for many of the changes included in the legislative "streamlining" act of 1946.

Other members of the committee include Banker Winthrop W. Aldrich, Publisher Henry R. Luce, CIO secretary-treasurer, James B. Carey, Foreign Aid Chief Paul G. Hoffman, President Charles E. Wilson of General Electric Co., Board Chairman Beardsley Ruml of R. H. Macy & Co., and about two dozen other well-known farm, labor, business, church and civic leaders.

The committee opened its appeal with a sharp attack on the recent proposal of Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) to abandon the so-called "legislative budget."

Cannon, scheduled to become chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, has branded unworkable the plan under which taxing and spending committees are required to get together by February 15 of each year to fix a ceiling on appropriations.

Calling on all congressmen to "resist" Cannon's move, the letter said, "Congress cannot continue to appropriate money without any relationship or responsibility as to income."

It listed "four great dangers" to efficient operation and the recommended reforms—as:

1. Filibusters in the Senate. It urged passage of new rules under which debate could be cut off by a simple majority vote rather than the present two thirds.

2. "Blockades" in the House Rules Committee. The group proposed that the Rules Committee be required to report out any and all bills submitted by a regular House committee. The rules group would have the right to recommend either that the House consider the measure, or ignore it. But a simple majority of the House could override the Rules Committee.

In connection with the Rules Committee, the letter also attacked the practice of sending bills to the floor under "closed rules" which forbid amendments from the floor.

The citizens group conceded that this procedure might be desirable in some cases (for example, tax bills) but held that a two-thirds majority of the House should be required to approve them.

3. The third "great danger" was said to be "hostile coalitions" of Congressmen which cut across party lines and frustrate majority party control.

It recommended two steps to prevent this. First, it said, both the majority and minority parties in each house should appoint true "policy committees" which would include the chairmen of all standing committees. The letter said the present policy committees of the Senate are really "nothing more than steering committees" and do not provide enough definite party responsibility for legislative acts.

As a further step, the group strongly urged abolition of the traditional seniority system under which committee chairmanships are distributed on the basis of length of service. It would have the party leadership select committee chairmen on the basis of ability and support of the party's program.

4. The group said the fourth great danger is the prospect that professional congressional committee staffs will be converted into "patronage positions."

This was an indirect reference to recent Democratic hints that some committee "experts" hired by Republicans in the last two years will be replaced because they are believed guilty of playing GOP politics.

As a reform measure, the letter recommended "realistic staffing of committees with capable people from both parties."

'Stop Taft' Bloc Formed

Taf Ignores Demand

4. A Taft-led Senate GOP policy committee meeting and retiring Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (Mass.) meanwhile separately announced plans for today's Eightieth Congress finale. Both Taft and Martin said they looked for a minimum of oratory and very little business. Both Houses, however, may put through a resolution extending for 60 days the January 13 deadline of the special Hoover Commission, to enable it to file full reports. Three new Senators will be sworn in in the Senate—Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), J. Melville Broughton (D., N. C.) and Russell Long (D., La.).

The "Young Turk" break with the Republican Old Guard over another "Senate boss" term for Taft broke the peace of an otherwise quiet weekend round of party organizing conferences.

Apprised of the challenge, Taft predicted he will nonetheless be reelected "by a substantial majority" when Senate Republicans, reduced to 42 by the last election, meet on Monday.

In addition to the 12 Senators who conferred on ways and means of ousting Taft, Ives said he had one proxy—Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.)—making 13 in all. But the New Yorker said support wasn't limited to those invited to the meeting.

Attending the huddle, held in a Senate Rule Committee conference room, were Ives, Lodge and Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.), George D. Aiken and Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), H. Alexander Smith (N. J.), Raymond E. Baldwin (Conn.), Wayne Morse (Oreg.), William F. Knowland (Calif.), Chan Gurney (S. Dak.), Edward J. Thye (Minn.), and Milton R. Young (N. Dak.).

A reporter asked if Governor Dewey could be considered in any way interested in the move. Ives said he had not discussed it with Governor Dewey.

At a press conference following the meeting, Ives said the group had no intention of "creating a little clique" in the Senate—that they came together "to discuss the situation with which we are confronted.

"The consensus was we would oppose any change in the rules which would permit anyone who had served four years as chairman of the policy (steering) committee to serve for another four. The consensus also was that we would like to see Senator Lodge chairman of the policy committee."

Ives was asked if the group had considered any compromise, such as entering a candidate for fibor leader.

"No compromise was discussed," Ives said. "We will decide what to do about other offices as they come up. The feeling of the group is that the most strategic post is chairman of the policy committee—it's the most important office. That's where the major battle will occur. The first fight will come on the rules change."

A reporter asked if the "rebellion" would be carried into the next session of Congress if they failed to defeat Taft for the job.

"That remains to be seen," said Ives.

Ives praised Lodge's "modern viewpoint" and his service and experience record in the Senate. He pointed out that only three incumbent Republicans came to the Senate before Lodge in 1937, though Lodge later left the Senate for war service.

In addition, he said Lodge was the "logical" choice, since as chairman of the Republican resolutions committee he was chief craftsman of the 1948 Republican platform.

Ives said he admired Taft's "great intellectual honesty and courage."

U. S. Airlift 'Doing Greatest Job,' Says Barkley on Return

By The Associated Press

Vice President-elect Barkley arrived yesterday from Berlin and said the American airlift "is doing the greatest job in the history of aviation."

Barkley arrived aboard a big Constellation plane which landed from a foggy sky. With him were Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington, Comedian Bob Hope, Actress Jinx Falkenburg and Composer Irving Berlin.

"We had a wonderful trip," Barkley said, "and a pleasant Christmas with the airlift. The spirit of those men was wonderful."

TVA Report Shows Agency 'Paying Off'

By Walter T. Pulliam
Post Reporter

The Nation's 13-year, multimillion-dollar investment in the Tennessee Valley Authority is "paying off," the agency said yesterday.

In a 350-page annual report to the President and Congress, it cited:

1. Mounting power revenue, which it said totaled $48,770,000 during the past fiscal year. It listed its net power return as 4¼ per cent on its 405-million-dollar power investment.

15 Million Saving Cited

2. An estimated 15-million-dollar saving in flood damage during the past year on the Tennessee, lower Ohio and lower Mississippi rivers; approximately 13 million dollars in the city of Chattanooga alone.

3. Freight-cost saving to shippers of three million dollars through improved navigation on the Tennessee.

4. A rate of economic progress in the valley far ahead of adjoining Southeastern regions and the Nation as a whole.

"The valley is gaining in economic stature," the report said.

"The Tennessee Valley region," it declared, "today is more prosperous, better able to contribute to the welfare of the Nation and more capable of assuming a greater share of national responsibilities."

Created 288,600 Jobs

It pointed out 2100 manufacturing plants had started up in the seven-state, mid-south valley between 1933 and 1946, creating 288,600 new jobs for the valley's people. Fewer than a half-dozen of these new plants, the report said, had come from other parts of the country.

Per capita income in the valley, it said, had increased from 40 to 60 per cent of the national average, or in terms of purchasing power for the valley's people more than 200 per cent. Farm tenancy, it pointed out, had dropped 38 per cent since 1935.

Even in terms of increased tax collections the Nation is gaining through work of the regional agency, the report asserted, pointing out the seven valley States in 1933 paid only 3.4 per cent of the Nation's total income taxes whereas in 1946 they paid 6.3 per cent.

The report was signed by Chairman Gordon R. Clapp and James P. Pope of the TVA board, which has one vacancy.

In its financial statement, the agency showed its total value is carried as $819,942,172.

Meanwhile, TVA fertilizer operations drew criticism from the House Small Business Committee.

The committee concluded that "TVA has not substantially contributed to cheapening of the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients" as directed by Congress.

Hiss Linked to Spy Paper Typewriter, Committee Reports

Bykov, the only Russian contact Chambers has publicly named, arranged with individuals in the Government to furnish the information which Chambers said he collected and relayed to Bykov. And it made this explicit statement:

"The leaders of the Russian underground in this country caused to be delivered to four high sources in the Federal Government, who had been unusually productive, expensive Russian Bokhara rugs, in appreciation for their unusual service to the Soviet Union.

It said the names of these four were bing withheld in view of the grand jury investigation.

"However," said the committee, "at the proper time we intend to make full disclosure, not only of this rug deal, but all matters of evidence, with specific details as to one of the most serious espionage cases in the United States history."

Between 1932, when he became active as a Red courier, until 1938, Chambers obtained documents from the State Department, Bureau of Standards, Aberdeen Proving Ground and "certain information" from the Navy, the report said. In addition, it quoted Chambers as testifying that "the same ring with which he worked got vital information from key United States industries."

In addition to State Department documents of the type turned over to the committee, Chambers gave the committee details of some of the information obtained from other sources. This included, the committee said, information on a new Navy self-sealing aircraft fuel tank; metallurgical information on the Norden bombsight; and lists of foreign intelligence agents and naval intelligence reports.

How 2 Gave Up Papers

Chambers described in detail, the committee reported, the manner in which he received documents from two sources in the State Department.

His operations with his "principal source" there were described thus:

The source would bring the documents in a brief case to his own home, where Chambers would pick them up and deliver them to a photographer, who would take them to Baltimore for filming. The documents would be returned the same night to Chambers, who would take them at once to the home of his source to be returned to State Department files.

Chambers then would pick up the films in Baltimore and take them in a tobacco pouch to New York, where they would be delivered to Bykov, whom he knew then only as Peter. The committee said that, as far as it could determine, Bykov "had no official position in this country and was an illegally present alien spy."

Won't Disclose Names Now

It was not revealing "at this point" the names given by Chambers as "coconspirators," the committee said, in order not to hamper prosecution of cases by the Department of Justice.

Former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, in whose office Hiss was employed at the time described by Chambers, gave the committee details of office routine in dealing with classified papers. The committee also questioned two others who had access to such documents inside the office, Miss Eunice Lincoln, administrative assistant, and Miss Anna Belle Newcomb, secretary and stenographer. They testified that these papers were delivered in a locked box from the code room and returned the same way when no longer needed.

"The testimony of Mr. Sayre and Miss Lincoln, the committee reported, "brought out that it was a practice for both Mr. Sayre and Mr. Hiss to take documents in their brief case from the Department of State at night to their homes for study."

Testimony From Sayre

The committee said Sayre testified that documents said to be in Hiss' handwriting, which were turned over by Chambers, had not been prepared for him or under his instruction. He also testified that there was no reason the typewritten documents would be prepared in the normal course of department business and said neither the typed or handwritten documents had been brought to his attention.

The committee repeatedly stressed its efforts to cooperate with the Justice Department, which has been critical of its operations. It reported that the Justice Department was advised of every major discovery and that its evidence was turned over promptly to Justice representatives. At the same time, it indirectly criticized the department for not taking earlier action on information of Soviet spy activities and called on it for help in strengthening present espionage laws.

Expects Further Indictments

Its agreement with the Justice Department not to question publicly witnesses called in connection with the perjury indictment of Hiss prevents it from reporting some pending leads, the committee said. Definite leads will continue to be developed privately, it added.

"However," said the committee, "we are convinced that by diligently pursuing its activities on this case our committee, if aided by equally diligent activities by the Department of Justice, will secure further indictments or confessions in connection with these espionage activities."

The committee concluded its report with four recommendations designed to "avert the continuation or recurrence of espionage." These were:

1. Enact legislation modeled on the Mundt-Nixon bill to control Communist activity.

2. Early action by the Eighty-first Congress to strengthen United States espionage laws and providing for deportation of aliens convicted of crimes against this Nation.

3. Increase of penalties for contempt of Congress to a minimum of five years in prison and a $5000 fine.

4. Study of immigration and passport laws to determine what changes are needed to "prevent disloyal elements from entering this country and remaining here."

It recommended continuation of the committee and said it had supplied the House with "the greatest file against un-American subversive forces which exists anywhere in the world today."

West Acts to Keep Germans Disarmed

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Dec. 30 (NYHT).—United States, Britain and France have appointed a three-man "military security board" which will send inspection teams throughout west Germany to insure continued disarmament in fields of science, industry and military forces, it was learned today.

The board, which will have a sizable staff of economic and military experts, will be complementary to the International Ruhr Valley Authority in making sure that Germany can never use its resources for aggressive purposes. The board's authority encompasses a wider field than the Ruhr authority and its long-run importance may outstrip that of the latter.

It is planned to continue the board in some form after the occupation ends. Representation may be extended to Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg later.

The three commissioners named by the three military governors are: For the United States, Maj. Gen. James P. Hodges; for Britain, Maj. Gen. V. J. Westropp, and for the French, General Paskiewicz.

The commissioners will be responsible to the proposed tripartite commission (consisting of the three military governors), which will supervise the west German government until the peace treaty.

In London, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British military governor in Germany, held important talks today.

It was learned they were concerned primarily with plans for a Big Three conference to settle differences between the United States, British and French military governors over an occupation statute for western Germany.

[The United Press reported that the United States military government promised Germans tonight that there would be no food crisis in Berlin this winter. The promise and a statement calling economic recovery in western Germany "amazing" were made by an official AMG spokesman over the western German radio network.

[Production has increased 50 per cent in the last six months and Germany is now exporting at the rate of 700 million dollars a year compared with 200 million dollars a year ago, the spokesman said.

[A long-range program under which American and German government officials, health and welfare workers, university professors and students will exchange visits was announced today by the AMG. The program is intended to "plant the seeds of democratic political action in German," it was announced.]

France, Britain Act to Smooth Relationships

Paris, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—France and Britain agreed tonight to try to improve their worsening relations before the friction endangers western defense plans.

The Quai D'Orsay announced that Foreign Minister Robert Schuman will go to London January 12 for a two-day conference with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Schuman's trip suggested by Bevin, will climax months of steadily deteriorating Anglo-French relations.

Schuman and Bevin are expected to talk about these main sources of Anglo-French disagreement:

(1) Allied policy in Germany. (2) Trade relations under the Marshall Plan and the whole European economic cooperation program; (3) The French franc; (4) The Western European Union, and (5) The disposition of Italy's former colonies.

No Russian Zone Change In Mind, Says Top Red

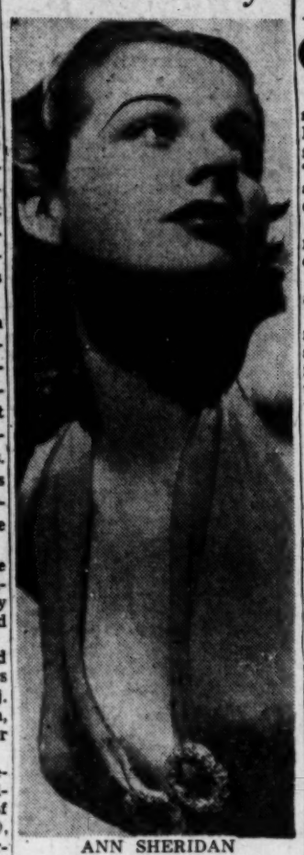
18 Die in Polish Train Wreck

Berlin, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—A Soviet general and 17 other persons were reported killed in a Polish train wreck caused by partisan saboteurs, western Allied officials said today.

The train, a Berlin-Moscow express carrying high eastern European personages to Russia for a Pan-Slavic celebration, was derailed and blown up last Friday near Lowicz, 50 miles west of Warsaw.

Allied authorities said it was "definitely sabotage."

'Oomph' Girl Ill With Pleurisy



ANN SHERIDAN
Getting better

London, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Ann Sheridan, Hollywood's "Oomph Girl," was reported recovering today from a serious pleurisy and pneumonia attack. A few days ago her condition was so bad that her three doctors feared it might be dangerous to remove her to a hospital.

Miss Sheridan is being treated in her Savoy Plaza suite by a physician and two chest specialists. She is making a movie here.

"Ann is definitely improving, but she's not allowed outside her room," her secretary said. "She is recovering from a bad attack of pleurisy and a touch of pneumonia in one lung. At one time we were tearing our hair out, but she's getting better now."

Finnish Envoy To Moscow Called Home

Helsinki, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Informed sources said today that the Finnish Minister to Moscow, Cay Sundstroem, has been called home for "informative talks" on the deterioration of Soviet-Finnish relations during the past few weeks.

They said Sundstroem will arrive in Helsinki January 7 for cabinet talks lasting a few days.

No official comment was available.

Those informants said the Finnish government has resented Russian radio and press attacks following the arrest by Finnish police of two Soviet citizens in Helsinki for "drunk and disorderly conduct."

statement of fact and spoke for itself.

"Have you been in contact with any of these (Russian) leaders" he was asked.

Mr. Truman said that, no, he hadn't been.

No Mindszenty Comment

At the outset of the news conference, the President was to comment on the arrest of Cardinal Mindszenty by the Communist-dominated government of Hungary.

He replied that Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett had covered this thoroughly on Wednesday, and added that he was in agreement with what Lovett said.

(The Undersecretary told newsmen that the arrest of Cardinal Mindszenty was the culmination of a long series of offensive acts taken by the Hungarian government against personal freedom, human freedom, and now religious freedom. He said the arrest was a sickening sham, based on charges that were patently false.)

Bryson Rash, correspondent of the American Broadcasting Co., asked Mr. Truman what he thought of the part played by television in the 1948 political campaign.

The President said he thought television was very important where it was in use, but he felt that it did not cover enough territory. He said he wished it had been more extensive.

Question on China

"The Chinese Communists have said that Chiang Kai-shek and other Chinese Nationalists would be considered war criminals," a reporter said. "Mr. Lovett says he thinks that would be unthinkable. Can you comment?"

Mr. Truman said that Undersecretary Lovett made the proper statement. He added that the Chiang Kai-shek government is recognized as the government of China by all the governments of the world.

Asked whether he would recommend further aid for China, the Chief Executive said he would answer that in a message to Congress. He pointed out that the matter won't come up until April 1.

He said he had no plans to see Mme Chiang Kai-shek again.

Leadership Prediction

Mr. Truman replied to many questions by saying that the answers would be found in his State of the Union and budget message to Congress. He said that today he would see the Big Four—Vice President-elect Barkley and prospective Speaker Sam Rayburn, and the prospective democratic leaders of the two houses—Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois and Representative John McCormack of Massachusetts.

A reporter reminded Mr. Truman that Luces and McCormack had not yet been officially elected as leaders.

The President, unable to resist, told the reporter that he could make a better guess on that than he did on the election. All joined in the laughter that followed.

Hungarians Are Penalized

do with the conviction and imprisonment of the head of the church in Yugoslavia, Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, in 1946. Yugoslavia's Communist government charged Stepinac wth collaboration with the Germans and sent him to prison for 16 years.

Mindszenty has not been available to reply to the charges. Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, has declared the arrest was "the first grim step in another totalitarian mock-trial"

A Vatican source said the Sacred College of Cardinals sent a letter to Pope Pius XII saying the cardinals protested "before the whole civilized world for this new, grave offense against the liberty of the church."

In connection with Mindszenty's arrest the Vatican radio broadcast that the Vatican had done "all possible to discover and have taken care of" the crown of St. Stephen, venerated for centuries by the Hungarian nation.

Subsequently a United States official in Berlin said the crown is in the safekeeping of the American military government at Munich. Washington has reached no decision yet regarding the return of the crown, the informant said.

The crown of Hungary's canonized monarch was among booty taken from Hungary by the Germans during the war and was recovered by United States troops in 1945.

Another sacred relic, the preserved hand of St. Stephen, was ceremoniously returned to Hungary by the United States Army in August, 1945. The Americans held the crown because of the possibility that it might be seized as "reparations" by the Soviet.

St. Stephen, Hungary's first King, lived from 975 to 1038 and labored to make Hungary a Catholic nation.

The Hungarian government yesterday accused Msgr. Giovanni Batista Montini, the substitute for the Vatican Secretary of State, of having connived with Cardinal Mindszenty to keep the crown out of Hungarian hands in order to deprive the present government of the prestige of receiving it.

Europe May Ask 4.3 Billion

131,000,000. Fuel—coal and oil—imports will cost 798 million dollars during the year. Another $2,145,000,000 will be spent on raw materials and manufactured products. Machinery and equipment will cost 937 million dollars.

The difference between what Europe plans to import and export results in a deficit of $4,637,000,000. By paring requests and substituting European products for those now requested from America, the OEEC thinks that deficit can be trimmed by 307 million dollars.

The 19 countries plan to sell $1,283,000,000 worth to the United States and Canada next fiscal year. They plan to sell another 587 million dollars to the rest of the Western Hemisphere and $1,921,000,000 to the rest of the world.

Optimistic Plans

Planned sales in currencies other than dollars come to $7,262,000,000 and include exports worth $2,564,000,000 to the sterling currency area alone. The OEEC considers these export plans on the optimistic side.

The export target is set 18 per cent higher than this year. Sales in dollars are planned at a rate 25 per cent above 1948-49. ERP countries plan to reduce their dependence on foreign services, especially shipping, from 674 million dollars this year to 454 million dollars next.

An equally ambitious program for increasing production in Europe calls for a boost in industrial production next year of about 10 per cent. It involves the output of 80 per cent more electricity than Europe produced before the war, 63 per cent more petroleum, 15 per cent more steel, 8 per cent more textiles and 25 per cent more machinery.

Goals for 1949

The OEEC report to Washington gives the following targets for next year:

Europe plans to produce 3 per cent more bread grains, 6 per cent more coarse grains, 15 per cent more fats and oils and 9 per cent more meat. Planned bread grain production amounts to 33,120,000 tons; another 39,000,000 tons of coarse grains would be produced.

European coal production is to be increased 7 per cent, to 447,300,000 tons, next year. But 13,000,000 tons of coal from Poland and 11,000,000 tons from America still will be needed.

Electric power capacity is to be increased by four million kilowatts, and 50 per cent more current is to be produced. Oil refineries are to increase their capacity by 32 per cent, or 6,600,000 tons, during 1949-50. Imports of crude oil will climb to 26,089,000 tons (2½ times prewar), and imports of refined petroleum will be reduced to 27,408,000 tons. By refining in Europe, ERP countries will save 39 million dollars.

Production of Metals

Steel production is to be increased 9.5 per cent, to 49,800,000 tons, next year. The German bizone alone will provide 45 per cent of the increase and 65 per cent of the increase in output of finished steel. Production of other metals will be up about 10 per cent; aluminum production will be about 10 per cent greater at 263,000 tons; copper production will increase to 549,000 tons. Lead output will go up to 549,000 tons, zinc to 547,000 tons and tin to 134,000. In every case but zinc, imports are to equal home production in quantity.

Textile production is to be increased by 11 per cent to a level above prewar and will requre imports of 1,431,000 tons of raw cotton—about 40 per cent from America.

European production of machinery and equipment will satisfy 85 per cent of Europe's needs. Only special equipment is to be imported from America. Europe's expenses for foreign shipping charges, which were 333 million dollars last year and are 164 million dollars this year, are to be cut to 90 million dollars next year.

C. & P. Exceeds 100 Million in Plant Outlay

By S. Oliver Goodman

Still expanding at a lively pace, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. has passed the 100-million-dollar level in total investment in plant here.

F. G. Macarow, vice president and general manager, pointed out yesterday that plant investment stood at $100,373,092 as of November 30, an increase of $11,367,843 over the same 1947 date.

In addition, C. & P. directors yesterday authorized a further outlay of four million dollars for the first three months of 1949. Of this amount, $1,104,000 will be spent on initial installation of dial equipment in the Brookland center. This will make available 5300 subscriber lines and will provide facilities to clear up about 1000 unfilled applications for telephone service.

Another $802,000 will be spent on installation of the fourth unit of dial equipment in Anacostia. The new equipment will provide 7000 additional subscriber lines.

Meanwhile, C. & P. yesterday reported November operating revenues of $2,870,050 against $2,460,686 in the same 1947 month. Operating expenses of $2,559,237 increased $292,310. The full monthly impact of the recent wage settlement which became effective November 7 will not be felt until results are reported for December. Net income for November totaled $308,200, compared with $196,326 for the same 1947 period.

For the first 11 months this year, net amounted to $3,596,461, against $2,240,026. Telephones in service at the end of November numbered 445,417, against 407,808 last year.

STORE SALES: For the first 11 months this year, sales of six leading Washington department stores showed an increase of 5 per cent over the same 1947 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. November sales were unchanged. Regionally, sales of 91 department stores in the Fifth Reserve District gained 6 per cent in the first 11 months and were unchanged in November.

ODD LOTS: Duke Power Co. has changed its mind and instead of privately selling its proposed 40-million-dollar bond issue will offer it through competitive bidding . . . Car and truck output in the United States for 1948 will total 5,266,926 units, Automotive News estimated yesterday. This volume is just four days' output short of the 1929 record mark . . . Stewart Warner Corp. will segregate its radio and television production in a separate division to be known as Stewart-Warner Electric . . . National Sugar Refining Co. announced that effective Monday its price on refined sugar will be 8 cents a pound as against the current price of 7¾ cents.

OUTPUT OFF: Industrial production dropped a notch in November after hitting a postwar high the month before. The nation's factories and mines last month produced 94 per cent more than the average for 1935-1939, the Federal Reserve Board said, as compared with the October figure of 95 per cent. As for prices, the board reported: "Wholesale prices and consumers' prices declined about 1 per cent from mid-October to mid-November, reflecting chiefly decreases in livestock and foods." Further declines were noted in the first three weeks of December, although metal prices rose.

REFUNDING: The Treasury said yesterday that holders of $431,848,000 out of $6,126,729,000 in Government securities maturing January 1 have elected to be paid off in cash. Holders of the remaining $5,694,881,000 in 1⅛ and 1½ per cent Treasury certificates and notes have accepted the Treasury offer to exchange new one-year, 1¼ per cent certificates for their old securities.

Jews Form Virtual Ring About Gaza

Tel Aviv, Palestine, Dec. 30 (AP).—U. N. observers today reported Gaza, main Egyptian base in Palestine, virtually surrounded by Jewish forces.

The observer at Gaza reported to headquarters at Haifa that it appeared likely the Arab port eventually would be in the same position as th Faluja pocket, 30 miles southeast of Tel Aviv, where an Egyptian force of about 5000 has been surrounded since mid-October.

The U. N. account thus confirmed the surmises of reporters here that the Jews were dominating positions overlooking the road southward from Gaza, but are leaving open an escape hatch for the Egyptians if they wish to take it. Meanwhile, Israel's air force and navy make reinforcement of the port by sea difficult if not impossible.

The Israel army spokesman said fighting in the Negev spread to a wider area today, but was on a less intense scale. U. N. observers, who are able to function only on the Egyptian side, said there was little military activity.

There was no indication that Iraqis had made good the threat of Premier Muzahim Al Pachachi of Iraq to resume fighting in central Palestine.

The Israeli government remaned noncommittal concerning its reaction t othe U. N. Security Council order for another ceasefire in the Negev. The official order had not yet been received.

General Upheld By Wainwright

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 30 (AP).—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, retired defender of the Philippines, denied today a historian's report that surrender of Bataan violated his and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's orders.

Wainwright said Lieut. Gen. Edward P. King, in a hopeless position, had surrendered his forces to the Japanese in April, 1942, before he could receive the orders.

The historian, Dr. Louis Morton, was quoted in Seattle yesterday as saying King surrendered in violation of specific orders from Wainwright. Morton, Army historian for the Pacific section, spoke to a historical association meeting.

Lanky General Wainwright, who retired from the Army last year, received the press today in the office of an insurance firm he now heads.

"Make this plain," Wainwright said: "I knew that King's position was hopeless, but I had positive orders from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, then in Australia, in which General MacArthur had radioed, and these were his exact words: 'There must be no thought of surrender. You will attack.'

"I transmitted these orders to General King, well knowing he could not attack. But Col. Jesse Traywick came back to me and said, 'It is too late. General King has already sent an officer forward with the white flag.'"

(Colonel Traywick was duty officer on Corregidor on the morning of April 9, 1942.)

"General King had sent the officer with the white flag before he got direct orders from me to hold Bataan. He absolutely did not disobey me. I want to see no aspersion cast upon General King. He is a gallant soldier, a brave and courageous man and a fine gentleman. It makes me very angry to hear any criticism of him."

Plan to Rearm Japan Denied

By the United Press

A State Department spokesman yesterday dismissed as "totally without foundation" reports that Gen. Douglas MacArthur has suggested that the United States rearm Japan.

President Truman told his news conference he had never heard of the reports.

Their statements came after Soviet Ambassador Alexander Panyushkin attributed the reports to the "press" and demanded an explanation from the United States. He spoke at a meeting of the Far Eastern Commission and a formal United States reply may be made the same way.

Dutch Tighten Sumatra Hold; Take Last Rich Area

Batavia, Java, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Dutch tightened their hold on oil and rubber rich Sumatra today after announcing capture of the only remaining economically important area.

"Resistance was negligible," the Dutch army communique said in announcing the capture of the Djambi oil fields in southern Sumatra Wednesday. The fields reportedly suffered only minor damage.

The "police action" against the Indonesian republic was geared to meet a timetable. The Dutch have occupied all major republican cities in Java and have linked many of them. They have informed the United Nations Security Council they will order a cease-fire in Java at midnight Friday.

In Sumatra—the most valuable natural resources area of the Indies—they are rushing to link Dutch-held territory in the north and south. Their timetable calls for a cease-fire in Sumatra two or three days after Java.

From "somewhere in Java" a fugitive Republican radio station reported Republican guerillas opened a synchronized attack on four Dutch-held cities early yesterday morning.

The radio claimed that the guerillas destroyed buildings in Malang and tatured Dutch policemen.

DUTCH BLITZ THREAT to WORLD

by SAMUEL GRAFTON

Our worst danger is that we will follow a policy of embarrassed friendship with the Dutch Government. The Dutch imperialists know, of course, that we will not approve of their attempted rape of the Indonesian Republic. They know the West, in general, won't like it. But they hope nothing much will develop in the way of opposition beyond an inconclusive U.N. proceeding, a couple of strong magazine articles, and some disapproving editorials in a dozen American newspapers—and they probably know in advance which ones. They hope we will go Blimpish, that we will blush a little, but end up by sputtering: "Regrettable . . . most . . . ah, yes . . . but fellow club member, you know . . . Western Union . . . that sort of thing. Very sad. Whiskey, please."

That is not good enough. We must drop the policy of embarrassed friendship. We must replace it with a policy of calculated opposition. The Dutch Government must be made to realize that it has not merely embarrassed its friends, but that it has made new opponents for itself. It must be made to see that it has not merely lost our smile, but that it has wounded and angered us, and strained our relationship.

They Won't Be Enchanted

The people of Indonesia (and of all Asia and Australia, from which the protests are pouring in) will not be enchanted to learn that we are their friends at the Dutch court. They will not be entranced to know that sometimes, in the Queen's palace, between tea and toast, we murmur that it might be wise to go slowly in the East Indies. The plain truth is that the world spits on that kind of support today. That is the kind of support we once gave to Czechoslovakia, ten years ago, and we have lost Czechoslovakia.

We must drop Marshall Plan aid to Holland, and we must refuse to accept Dutch arguments that no actual Marshall Plan dollars are being used in the East Indies war, for these dollars release other funds which can and do go to war. We must, if we can, rescind our gifts of "non-combat war materials" to the Netherlands; and even if we can't rescind them, we must try to do so.

One Crotchety Country

For we must, somehow, convince Asia and the world that there exists in the West a great power which has a crotchety and unreasonable love of freedom, and which bases its international friendships on its love of freedom, and does not subordinate its love of freedom to maintain its friendships.

We must face the fact that we may yet someday have to go it alone in this world if the Dutch continue as they are doing, if the French persist in their colonial efforts, if the British do not give up their muddling adventures with the Arabs. In a world in which change is as swift as it is in this one, and in which hope for freedom is the leading passion, and one made bitter by much waiting, we may yet find it safer to stand alone than to keep this company.

These Friends Need a Quarrel

For there is an unsolved ideological problem standing before the Western Alliance. And that is whether, when many nations have bound themselves together as tightly as these have, one among them has the right to give an offensive coloration to the group by darting off on some wretched enterprise of its own.

I do not believe any Western nation has such a right. If it tries to exercise such a right, I believe it should be called to account. The only argument for not doing so is that a quarrel might endanger the Western Alliance. That is stupidity. Only an ideological drying-up can endanger the Western Alliance. What the Western Alliance must fear most is a loss of function. As a protective association for worried imperialists it has no future. As an organization which can flame into quarrel over the rights of man it has all mankind for its potential friends. Let the healing quarrel begin. The world and the century wait. Carrier Missions

Some persons have seen in Secretary Forrestal's annual report the implication that he looks with disfavor on giant aircraft carriers. This impression no doubt stems from his remark: "I believe also that the naval air arm should be preserved as an integral part of the Navy, but that its development should be in terms of its own mission, which is distinctly not a competitive one with the strategic Air Force." But the context does not bear out the interpretation based upon his sentence. Mr. Forrestal also states: "I believe the Air Force, in its long-range strategic bombers, has a weapon which will play a great part in any future conflict, but that it has limitations and should not be relied upon to the exclusion of the Army and Navy." Further: "Working together in close understanding and harmony with the Air Force, the air arm of the Navy can be a powerful adjunct of our total air striking power."

If any one theme marks the Forrestal report, it is the theme that there is no panacea in any one weapon or tactic. Mr. Forrestal has favored the construction of one 65,000-ton supercarrier at a cost of 125 million dollars as a test of its capability. The keel of this vessel will be laid shortly. There would be no excuse for a carrier of this size if it were intended solely for fleet support. Pretty clearly it is designed as an experimental vehicle for determining the practicability of naval participation in the over-all bombing mission. There is nothing in the report to indicate that Mr. Forrestal has withdrawn his approval of the first supercarrier.

No element of competition, in our opinion, need be involved. The final criterion is what is to be done rather than who is to do it. As a practical matter, long-range bombing from this continent still leaves much to be desired. Not only are land-based bombers still short of the working range that may be necessary; they create a fuel problem. In other words, until the capability of land-based bombing for what is necessary is established beyond question, there is room for both naval and Air Force participation in bombing missions, especially in the early stages of a conflict before overseas bases might be available. The Air Force, of course, should retain primary responsibility for strategic bombing, but it would be foolish to exclude carrier-based aviation employed tactically in conjunction with the Air Force.

Arms For China

The arms for China school of thought remains unabashed by the spectacle of Nationalist gun-running in China for the Communists. Even Representative Sol Bloom, the next chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, has joined it. This in the face of ineluctable facts that rob it of any standing. All official reports coincide on the conclusion that Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists have lost no battle for want of munitions. Confirmation is provided almost every day by the newspaper correspondents. In turn these correspondents are confirmed by reports in the newspapers in China, as, for instance, the American-owned Shanghai Evening Post, which, in the issue for December 13, writes of the "combination of Nationalist defection, unreformed Nationalist military machine, inability of Nationalist leadership to act on expert foreign advice, and incapacity of the Nationalists even to retain physical possession of munitions provided for them." Here, then, is a syllogism to ponder: wars are fought with arms, the Nationalists have not lost any battle because of lack of arms, therefore, the remedy is to give them more arms. The logicians would call this a reductio ad absurdum.

Some of the Chiang-aiders, realizing the absurdity of this type of argument, have now gone off on a new tack. The Nationalists need American arms plus American officers and American men, plus American control to give them leadership and a spinal column. That would mean direct involvement. Aside from any question of whether we can afford it, what does this mean? The same type of involvement that the Dutch have contracted in Indonesia, the same that the United States has contracted in Greece. It ought to be realized by this time that it is easier to get into a foreign situation than to get out of it. Thus, if involvement did not quickly pacify the subcontinent of China, then there would be demands for more American troops, more American leadership, more American resources, and they could not be resisted. In time the assumed responsibility for 500 million Chinese would completely eclipse our domestic and general responsibilities. Once in China, we should never be out, and the upshot would be a diversion of our energies which would be ruinous to our exchequer and to our strategy. Nothing would please the Kremlin more.

Committee Packing

Some of the Democratic legislators converging on Washington fear that much of what they gained in the election last month may be lost in the caucus of Democratic Representatives on Saturday afternoon. This caucus, in addition to selecting the Speaker and the majority leader, will fill six Democratic vacancies on the powerful Ways and Means Committee. It is said that the House leadership, meaning primarily Speaker-to-be Rayburn of Texas and Representative Doughton of North Carolina whom the seniority rule will make chairman of Ways and Means in spite of his 85 years, have prepared a slate giving their friends from the South the predominant voice in this key committee. If that is true, the Administration's program may go to Congress with the cards stacked against it at the very beginning.

It is not merely the control of one dominant committee that is at stake. The Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee become automatically their party's Committee on Committees in the House. They will select the majority members of all other standing committees of the House, including the Rules Committee, which, unless its powers are modified, can hasten or block the passage of any reported bill. In other words, the make-up of the Ways and Means Committee may fix the pattern of legislative action for the next two years.

This is a matter of such importance that it obviously should not be left to the decision of a few individuals. It ought to be a matter of high party strategy. It is the type of issue that could well be discussed in a legislative-executive council, if such an agency for bridging the gap between the Capitol and the White House existed. In any event, it is a vital concern of the entire leadership of the Democratic Party because of the effect it may have on that party's performance and fortunes in the next two years.

It may be, of course, that the caucus on Saturday will revolt against the Rayburn-Doughton slate and force a fair representation of Northern and Western Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee. But revolts of this sort are rare and difficult to organize. More effective, no doubt, would be pressure from the more liberal elements of the party before the caucus convenes. If the great body of Northern and Western Democrats who were largely responsible for the victory of their party in November do not step in and insist on a fair representation in these committee assignments, they will have only themselves to blame for probable obstruction of their legislative program.

Egyptian Omen

The assassination of the Premier of Egypt, Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrasky Pasha, is an omen of trouble among the Middle Eastern nations which sought to prevent the establishment of Israel. None of the governments, after beating the big drum of a holy war, has let in any light on events in Palestine. On the contrary, the people have been thoroughly deluded. They have been handed tale after tale of victories that never happened, of war to the death, and of the approaching extinguishment of Israel. The assassination of the Egyptian Premier seems to have been the response to this propaganda on the part of a fanatical Muslim youth who at last had learned the truth.

It is this policy of hiding the facts that makes it as difficult for the Arab governments to make peace as to wage war. Here the United Nations could have been helpful. If there had been more vigor in the Security Council, the Arab governments doubtless could have turned to their people and said: "We can't go on with the war, because the mighty United Nations says no," and their difficulty would have been eased. But the powers in the United Nations, timorous to the last about Palestine, paid so little attention to realities that it failed to afford even a crutch to the Arab governments, so that they could climb down with a minimum loss of face. In so behaving they have injured the United Nations throughout the Middle East.

Look To Tito

The difficulty of framing a policy toward the excommunicated Tito is due to the fixed idea that you can't do business with Communists, nationalist or internationalist. But that depends on the Communist and the way you do it. Nothing would be more hampering to the prosecution of a sound and successful foreign policy than to cast all the Communist governments into outer darkness, particularly Tito's. Whether Tito's break with Stalin means a break with aggression, Stalinist or Yugoslav, we don't know, but our diplomacy ought to find out. The opportunity for an approach along lines comporting alike with strategy and statesmanship is presented by Tito's turn to the West for trade exchanges. Tito is a Communist, his government is Communist; but it would be the height of folly not to exploit the Tito-Kremlin split.

Moreover, one of the insurances of success for the Marshall Plan is the restoration of East-West trade in Europe. Yugoslavia is a storehouse of metal and mineral wealth which is necessary to industrial Europe. At present the commerce of Yugoslavia is running down. Tito aimed high, too high, in his plans of industrialization. In any case the tools are not available to him in eastern Europe because this area is mainly agricultural. And Tito never seems to have gotten what was available. The Kremlin's notion of trade is to suck the wealth out of its satellites and to give nothing in return. Tito, considering his communism much purer than the Kremlin's, is not quite frank even in his biting references to this one-way trade. It is Schachtism plus, though Tito, with his addiction to ideology, calls it the infiltration of "capitalistic" practice into Socialist commerce! The final injury to Tito is the squeeze to which he is being subjected by the Soviet and its satellites.

So Tito, at considerable risk to himself, is turning to the West for markets which would yield him the goods he needs for industrialization. At present American trade with iron curtain countries, as with Soviet Russia, is virtually on a basis of economic warfare. That is to say, we are intent on buying the things we must have for our industries and our stockpiling, and making sure that we don't send in return more than is necessary to pay for them. Western European countries are not so restricted, though they are subject to restraints in this respect by the Marshall Plan. It is time for relaxation, for true economic warfare at this time would be to drive a wedge between Tito and the Kremlin. To the crusaders this is procommunism, but the sooner we subordinate crusade to policy, the better chance we shall have of winning the Cold War. This would mean neither a retreat from principle nor a backing of Tito.

Business Signs

Business forecasting is a hazardous activity—especially when, as now, some signs point toward trouble ahead, while others convey a message of assurance. The recent much-advertised lag in department store sales, compared with last year's record business, was followed by an eleventh-hour spurt in pre-Christmas buying that will make the final report for the year much more cheerful reading. Nevertheless, the proof that sales have fallen short of expectations is supplied by announcements of post-Christmas clearance sales on a scale which the public has not seen in years. Layoffs of workers, too, along with a decided increase in part-time work, point to a more than seasonal decline in business activity in some industries. Additional layoffs just announced by the C. & O. Railroad, for instance, are mainly attributable to a drop in coal shipments. And that drop signalizes the disappearance of coal shortages, with resultant localized unemployment or part-time work in coal mining areas. Even in respect of automobiles, the head of the Ford Motor Co. predicts that a buyers' market is "not too far away."

The appearance of buyers' markets in industries that have heretofore been striving to satisfy abnormally high demands does not warrant alarming predictions of imminent recession. But it does emphasize the need for a revision of specific production schedules. When the supply of any commodity reaches levels at which goods begin to pile up for lack of buyers at current prices, the remedy obviously lies in reduction either in the prices or in the output of such goods. Temporary unemployment resulting from such adjustments is unavoidable. If it does not spread to such an extent as to entail serious wage losses and consequent impairment of consumer buying power, the industrial shifts made necessary by the satiation of demand for certain kinds of goods will be offset by expansion elsewhere to satisfy demand for other kinds of goods. In short, if the purchasing power of the buying public can be maintained at high levels, a basis for continued high over-all business activity is assured.

Whether purchasing power can be thus sustained is, therefore, the really important question. The answer again is in the realm of prophecy. There is, however, some encouraging evidence that the sporadic declines in current buying are not entirely due to enforced curtailment of consumer buying brought about by high prices, but are in part the result of an increased propensity to save. According to the last SEC report, the ratio of individuals' saving to income during the third quarter of this year was higher than in 1947 and considerably above prewar levels. Of course, an increase in savings may result from shifts in the distribution of income that increase the income of the well-to-do at the expense of the rank and file of consumers. But, whatever the cause, an increase in savings provides a basis for expansion of the kind of spending that creates demands for capital equipment, houses and durable goods and both directly and indirectly provides additional jobs for workers.

SPIRIT ETERNAL

Spirit so scornful in your house of flesh,
So proud and utterly bereft of pity,
With each denial tearing down afresh
The walls that hide an undefended city;
You with electric wings to sear the night,
You, who when time is old will bear his staff,
Who leave me here a world beneath your flight,
To tremble at the echo of your laugh;

Remember pulses running against time,
And hands that crumble in the hands they hold,
Comfort the lips that murmur in their prime,
"Save me, my love, from ever growing old."
Spirit that knows no hunger, give the crust;
All that you never face, the body must.

Working Wives

On Page 17 of your December 23 issue you carried a story entitled "Working Wives, States Census, Outnumber the Single Girls." This was based on a Census Bureau report of that date on "Marital and Family Characteristics of the Labor Force in the United States: April, 1948."

The third paragraph of your news story states, in error, that "In 1940 only about 15 per cent of the married women who were working were living with their husbands. This year the proportion was 22 per cent."

This would mean that of 8.3 million married women in the labor force in 1948 only 1.8 million were living with their husbands, and that of five million married women in the labor force in 1940 only about 800,000 were living with their husbands. This is not correct.

What the report stated was this: "In March, 1940, only 15 per cent of the married women living with their husbands were members of the labor force; by April, 1948, the proportion had gone up to 22 per cent."

This means that the 7.6 million married women in the labor force in 1948 who were living with their husbands represented 22 per cent of all married women living with their husbands (34,289,000), and the 4.2 million married women in the labor force who were living with their husbands in 1940 represented 15 per cent of all married women living with their husbands in that year (28,517,000).

The 728,000 married women in the 1948 labor force who were not living with their husbands represented 49 per cent of the 1.5 million married women who were not living with their husbands, while the 840,000 married women in the 1940 labor force who were not living with their husbands represented 53 per cent of the 1.6 million married women not living with their husbands.

Moreover, of the 8.3 million married women in the labor force, 7.6 million living with their husbands represented 92 per cent, leaving about 8 per cent not living with their husbands. Of the five million married women in the labor force in 1940, 4.2 million, about 84 per cent, were living with their husbands and 16 per cent were not living with their husbands.

Welles' Statesmanship

Thank you for the kindly editorial on Mr. Welles on December 28. But those of us who watch the daily unfolding of shocking un-American news feel constrained to say that the editorial could have been—and should have been—far more than kindly. You note that "Mr. Welles sometimes seems a solitary figure in our national life."

Indeed yes, and what must be the awful solitude of this great American, so highly equipped by education, long training, and first-hand experience for directing our foreign affairs, when he reads daily perforce the repudiation of fundamental American principles.

If some there be who find his manner "aloof," even "icy," those who have read his recent books, his newspaper column, and heard him speak in public, have no such impression. If little people, like the writer, can but watch from futile corners in frustration and shame, the fatal trend of American policy, what must be the frustration of an experienced pilot like Mr. Welles whose highest service to his country in its awful need is but to sit and wait?

Our great and tragic need in these times is for a practical, far-sighted statesman with first-hand experience. We want no appeal to the least common denominator of our people, nor even the highest common denominator. We need a patriotic, history-minded statesman, away out in front, ahead of the people, ahead of his times, as have been all great leaders.

One of our representatives on the national level was referred to recently as a man who can stand up to the Russians. But are the Russians the only people who call for a full garrison of moral guns? Mr. Welles would find no difficulty in standing up to the Russians.

In addition he possesses that almost fabulous equipment of one who can resist the eclat, the awesome ritual, and the traditional charm of the British. And it takes but a cursory glance around the world: from the endless maneuvering in Palestine, the stalemate in Greece, the about-to-be-struck-with-sudden-blindness in Indonesia, down to Mr. Welles' own good neighbor policy for this hemisphere, now jangled out of tune, to realize how very necessary that rare equipment can be in the tragic present.

Eurasian Christmas

I wish to call attention to a very un-Christian episode in Milton Caniff's "Steve Canyon" of December 26, although his intention on the surface seems to be a plug for Christianity and Christmas. The episode referred to is that in which Miss Fancy is saying to Reed:

"No matter what Cheetah (the Eurasian) may have to offer, you and I have something in common she can't match."

The following panel shows an obviously Anglo-Saxon group singing Christmas carols. Does Mr. Caniff imply that only Anglo-Saxons observe the birth of Christ and consequently an Anglo-Saxon does not have enough in common with an Eurasian for a love affair? I am sure Mr. Caniff did not mean to be so exclusive, since he usually shows a better understanding of people.

Bridge Railings

Is it too much to hope that the Canal rd.-K st. overpass will have a metal rail—or will it be a solid concrete parapet, just high enough to wall us in a blind speedway?

Why deprive us of the wave of ecstasy or the sigh of peace that comes at the sight of that unhurried river in the changing of the seasons?

What man in what department decides these things?

In Defense Of Civil Service

I am quite concerned about the Alsop column in your issue of December 10 stating that "Being set up to provide the Government only with clerks and glorified clerks, the civil service system cannot produce anything else. There are no means of bringing into the Government highly qualified young men and women."

The commission always regrets that such general and unfounded criticism as this is printed widely because of the effect on morale of Federal employes and of the effect on recruiting for the Federal service.

Perhaps the Alsops did not realize that they said, in effect, to scientific and technical personnel of agencies such as the Bureau of Standards, the Forest Service, the Agricultural Research Center, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, "You are only clerks or glorified clerks!"

Perhaps they did not know that practically all the employes in agencies such as these—many of whom could earn much higher salaries in industry—are recruited under the civil service system. I single these agencies out of many I might mention only because the Alsops must be aware of the caliber of the work done by their employes.

Ninety-two per cent of all Federal positions in the United States are filled under the civil service system. As of July 1, 1948, there were 95,000 employes occupying professional and scientific positions under the Classification Act, and practically all of these positions are filled under the civil service system. There were 30,000 employes in positions in the top five administrative grades, practically all of which are filled under the civil service system.

The Civil Service Commission, which is primarily responsible for administering the civil service system, is organized, with the cooperation and assistance of Federal agencies, to effectively fill scientific, professional, technical, subprofessional, administrative, and skilled trades positions as well as clerical positions.

In Washington, examining committees have been established in many agencies, composed primarily of high-level operating officials who are outstanding in the scientific, technical and professional fields from which the agency draws personnel. Subject to the approval of the commission, these committees develop the examining methods and requirements for the various scientific, technical, and professional positions in the agency, prepare written tests, rate applicants, and establish lists of eligibles. These committees also suggest sources of recruitment and are encouraged to do everything they can to secure applications from outstanding persons.

Boards of civil service examiners in field establishments perform generally the same functions except that they also cover subprofessional and skilled trades positions and other lower grade positions necessary in the industrial operations of the Government.

The commission's examining staff is composed primarily of technical and professional examiners who work with committees of expert examiners and boards of civil service examiners and who rate applicants for agencies not having committees or boards and applicants for positions common to most Federal agencies.

In reply to the statement, "There are no means for bringing into the Government highly qualified young men and women," the commission has systematically and regularly announced since 1934 examinations designed specifically to attract into the Federal service the best type of recent college graduates and college seniors in a wide variety of occupational fields.

While these examinations have always resulted in the appointment of many of the most competent young people, we believe the proportion is not as high as it might be, partly because Federal salaries are less attractive than salaries in industry, and partly because of the generally unfounded attacks made on Government employes and officials in recent years, of which the Alsop statement is an example.

Arms And Inflation

BURIED in the 172 printed pages of Secretary of Defense Forrestal's first annual report are a few guarded references to what inflation has done to the drive to rebuild this country's armed strength to at least a minimum of security. The impression is of a man talking very fast but now and then glancing nervously over his shoulder at the specter following close behind him.

The larger issue of monetary policy in relation to spending for defense is not, of course, Secretary Forrestal's province. Yet it seems to me his report would have been stronger if he had faced up to what a 30-cent dollar (to use a purely arbitrary figure) will buy in the way of national security.

In spite of Forrestal's able marshalling of facts and figures a realistic answer to the basic question is hard to find. That question, it is hardly necessary to add, is, what progress have we made in rearmament?

Recently an alert visitor from abroad, who has a position of some responsibility in his own country, addressed himself during an intensive six weeks tour of the country to that very question. Shortly before he left for home he said:

"When I came, I was under the impression that you had carried your rearmament to at least a beginning stage. Therefore it followed that since the Russians had not begun a war last summer, they had now lost their trump cards. But I find that this is not true."

FAILING to take into account the difficulties and obstacles in the way of making a start, the visitor was probably too pessimistic. Yet in his pessmism he may have been closer to the truth than we would like to think or than Secretary Forrestal would have us believe.

The facts are no secret to the challenger in Moscow. The Russians can read. If the past is any criterion, they have an extensive intelligence system in this country as they have in every part of the world.

The American people are the only ones from whom this secret is being kept, if it is indeed a secret. Partly, the candid observer would add, we have only ourselves to blame. It is pleasant in the midst of this consumers' goods boom, when we are using more petroleum, more steel, more rubber than ever before, to think we are also getting rearmament and security.

Forrestal reported the strength of the Army had increased nearly 15 per cent from 541,000 to 620,000. The Navy and Marine Corps had increased 6 per cent and the Air Force 10 per cent.

But how much this increase has cost can be judged in relation to another figure in the report. Of the 15 billion dollars for defense in the coming fiscal year, approximately five billion dollars, or one third of the total, will go for pay, subsistence, clothing and so on.

IN OTHER WORDS, merely providing the necessities of life for the men in the armed services takes a substantial chunk before a single weapon is purchased. The clothing and shoes for a draftee cost twice what they did in 1940, and so does the food to keep him going.

The draft calls are revealing in this connection. The first call under the new draft act for the month of November was for 10,000 men and 7800 were inducted. The call for December was 15,000 with actual returns not yet in.

The call for January was to have been 20,000 but it has been reduced to 10,000. The call for February is for 5000 men.

Unless these reductions were made the armed services could not stay within the 15-billion-dollar limitation fixed on the defense budget. That is the heart of the matter. From the two thirds of the defense pie left after the soldier, sailor and flyer are fed and clothed must come the new jet planes, costly and complicated research into fantastic new weapons and construction toward such gadgets as the 125-million-dollar aircraft carrier approved after a long interservice row.

"The cost of this aid to the free European nations," said Forrestal of the program to provide "modest" rearmament beginnings in Europe, "added to the substantial sums which we are now spending and shall spend for our own military establishment, may necessitate hard decisions by our people. But those are decisions which they will make through their elected representatives after full consideration of the choices before them."

Not necessarily, the cynic will add. Some plain, harsh speaking will have to come first.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Best And Worst

WIESBADEN, Germany.—The phenomenon of the American air lift to Berlin may be taken as a sort of parable of the best and worst in American foreign relations. The air lift itself stands for the energy, ingenuity and great resources which have, at least thus far, enabled us to escape from the tight spots we keep getting into. But the circumstances that led to the air supply of Berlin stand equally well for the somewhat incoherent methods of policy-making which tend to get us into these tight spots.

The background story can and should be told at last. Briefly, as was reported in this space last spring, the Soviet blockade of Berlin was anticipated by American and British intelligence at least three months before it was imposed. Yet no coordinated advance preparations for the blockade were made, either between the American, British and French governments, or even between the American policy-makers in Washington and Gen. Lucius D. Clay and the other Americans in charge in Germany.

The trouble seems to have been that Washington was having one of its fits of the pouts over General Clay's occasionally rather arbitrary methods. At any rate General Clay, his political adviser, Ambassador Robert Murphy, and his air commander, Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. Le May, were left to agree among themselves upon a course of action. When the expected Soviet blockade was fully declared, they decided to call the Soviet bluff by sending an armed train or convoy through to the beleaguered city. They recognized the risk of war involved, but they estimated it as only one chance in ten.

AS SOON AS the Soviets cut all communication with Berlin, Clay told Washington he was ordering an armed convoy. A train was actually dispatched, and the American troops on board were ordered to resist Soviet interference with the train's progress. But the young officer in charge lost his nerve when the train was halted and this first installment of the plan miscarried.

Meanwhile Washington, London and Paris had begun running around in circles and barking like dogs. The notion of sending an armed convoy to Berlin was supremely repugnant to Paris. London was far from enthusiastic. And in Washington, the State Department's Russian experts made an estimate of the risk of war very different from that of the men on the scene in Berlin. Some other expedient had therefore to be devised.

Thus the air lift was born at the last minute, in an atmosphere of emergency and confusion and conflict. Having been organized at the last instant, the air lift was initially less effective than it should have been. And thus the political benefits derived from this great showing of American and British power were initially reduced, while the situation remained confused for some time.

There is still confusion in Paris, London and Washington, where it is still widely asserted that the air lift is too expensive or too dangerous to be continued indefinitely. The men in charge in Germany believe, however, that the air lift must now be treated as semi-permanent, and that planning for it must at least be on the basis of several years ahead. Where he put the risk of war from an armed convoy at only one in ten last July, General Clay is now understood to feel that in the new situation the odds are just the other way around.

THE REMAINING confusion meanwhile continues to impose its penalties. If the air lift is to be semi-permanent, it must be planned on the basis of keeping some sort of economic life going in Berlin's western sectors. And this is not yet being done.

The issue will shortly become acute. Berlin's industry has limped along at half speed thus far by expending local stocks of raw materials. These stocks are running out. Not long ago the Soviet Kommandatura approached the committee of Berlin industries of the western sectors and tried to bribe the committee members with every kind of promise, in return for a change of allegiance.

The committee's chairman, Dr. Spennrath, of German General Electric, has meanwhile just warned Ambassador Murphy and General Clay that new measures would have to be taken to meet the emergency created by exhaustion of raw material stocks. The combined west sector industries have also presented a plan for carrying on with no more than 700 tons of material delivered daily. With a little more than 20,000 tons of raw materials per month, we can importantly reduce the cost of feeding Berlin.

The job moreover can be done. Gen. William Tunner, commander of "operation vittles," has estimated that by simply replacing the 150 assorted British aircraft now operating into Berlin with the larger capacity C-54's, the average input can be raised to 8,000 tons daily. This means deliveries to Berlin of nearly 250,000 tons a month, or enough for all the city's needs. But this means also a tremendously increased effort to find these aircraft at home and perhaps some sacrifice to do so. It is time to begin facing up to this sort of necessity, and planning how to meet it in advance.

'How's Your Cold . . . ?'

Test to Speed Cold Research

biotics aureomycin and streptomycin, which already have proved themselves effective against such stubborn foes as Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tuberculosis.

Although the new test obviates the need for human volunteers as far as had been necessary to prove the presence of the virus, he said, volunteer prisoners will still be used in other phases of the study.

Other Phases Listed

The volunteers, he said, will be needed in recognition studies of agents other than the virus strain; to study duration of infectiousness from man to man; to observe any possible changes in reinfections, and perhaps for clinical demonstration of drugs found effective in the laboratory tests on the virus.

Drs. Atlas and Hottle said they first found the test they were looking for early in September in laboratory modifications of known biochemical procedures. Since then, they said, they worked towards perfecting and proving it.

Since the only known components common to all viruses isolated are protein and nucleic acid, they explained, they tested these substances in solutions of known infected and noninfected egg fluids. The protein tests drew a blank, or, as Dr. Atlas said, "did not afford a specific quantitative index."

However, by slight modification of laboratory procedures of testing nucleic acid with tryptophane-perchloric acid, they reported, they found the differential they were seeking. The noninfected fluids remained colorless in the final stage—the addition of tryptophane—perchloric acid—while those fluids capable of producing colds in human volunteers turned a pinkish-brown.

Index Set Up

Further procedures enabled them to set up a TPA index to determine the potencies of dilutions, and tell at what strength such fluids must be to produce colds in humans.

The scientists emphasized they are not yet certain they are working with the chief agent of the common cold, or whether the cold virus, like the influenza one, comes in many strains. What they do know, said Dr. Atlas, is that the isolated virus can and does produce a "very typical cold."

It starts with the typical feeling of stuffiness, he said, and goes through the normal 8 to 10-day range of the common cold. The symptoms proceed to nose and throat irritation, fatigue, sneezing, running nose, sore throat, aching and burning of the eyes, perhaps a fever on the third or fourth day, sore throat and hoarseness on the fourth to fifth day, aching in the chest, with some constriction, very little coughing and a gradual tapering off of the discomforts.

Other Tests Planned

Besides the drug tests to be made, further reseach will be done to determine contributing factors toward catching a cold, Dr. Atlas said. The volunteers, he said, may be asked to keep their feet in cold water, or may be subjected to other tests using cold, heat, dryness and other factors for scientific determination of the best ways to catch—or prevent catching—cold.

One thing is already pretty well known by observations on the Lorton prisoners. That is, that eating onions and garlic has not kept the men immune to the experimental infections.

"Many of them tried it," said Dr. Hottle. "But I guess it's true that garlic's best defense is that it keeps you at breath's length from people who may have colds. They came down with colds just as readily as the others.

Synchrotron 'Passes Test'

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 30 (AP).—University of Michigan scientists said today that their huge synchrotron, a new sort of "cosmic ray gun" which is meant to bombard atoms to pieces, has successfully passed its first test.

If the 15-ton device passes a final test later, it will soon explore unknown fields of atomic research.

Professors H. R. Crane and David M. Denison, its designers, have been building the synchrotron for two years.

The only device of its kind in the Nation, the 300 million-electron-volt "gun" shoots electrons at terrific speeds into atoms with the aim of splitting their nuclei or cores.

By this means, scientists hope to study the basic structure of electrons, and thus learn more about atomic energy.

23 Big C-97s Are Ordered By Air Force

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Twenty-three giant C-97 Stratofreighters are being ordered by the Air Force, it was announced yesterday.

With approval of President Truman, a contract will be awarded to the Boeing Aircraft Co., it was said. Cost of the planes, including engines and spare parts, will be $39,422,000.

The Stratofreighter has a maximum range of 4000 miles, top speed of over 300 miles an hour and can carry 20 tons of cargo. Officials said the craft are intended to replace cargo planes diverted to the Berlin airlift.

Airplanes assigned to Operation Vittles are wearing out faster than ordinarily and many may not be returned to routine military service.

It is possible the big air freighters may be put on the Berlin run—if the airlift lasts long enough—officials said. The C-97s, however, will not be delivered for months. Boeing now is working on a prior order of 37 C-97s, let last summer, and only a few have been delivered.

The 23 Stratofreighters are over and above the Air Force's 1948-49 plane order program. Funds for their purchase were obtained by a transfer of money appropriated for tooling and modifications of planes. All appropriations for new aircraft have been allotted and contracts placed, save orders totaling about 109 millions which have been waiting White House certification for weeks.

There has been criticism of the Air Force for ignoring the lessons of the Berlin airlift—that air supply is vital to air power—and failing to put sufficient money into new transport planes. Of the 2700 planes in the 1948-49 program, the only transports previously ordered were the 37 C-97s and 28 Douglas C-124s. Some Fairchild Packets and Northrop Pioneers were included, but these are troop carrier and special duty planes.

4 Inducted Here; December Total Is Raised to 76

Four men were inducted yesterday at the Armed Forces Examining and Induction Station, 403 10th st. nw., bringing the Washington total of Selective Service inductees to 76 for December.

Those inducted included James D. Cook, 24, 1279 Owens pl. ne., laborer; Floyd Oliver, 24, 1261 Morse st. ne., unemployed; Calvin C. Griffin, 24, 2106 I st. ne., cafeteria worker, and Clarence Peterson, 633 M st. ne., unemployed.

Nine requests for deferment have been considered by a panel of the appeal board, which reclassified one and recommended the others to be continued in the 1-A (available for military service) classification.

Several cases are under review by District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy.

Welles Continues 'Satisfactory'; Surgery Possible

Former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles continued in "satisfactory condition," Casualty Hospital authorities reported last night.

Physicians were keeping close watch to determine if surgery will be necessary on his frost-bitten fingers and toes, it was said.

The former diplomat has been hospitalized since Sunday morning when he was found unconscious in a windswept field more than a mile from his home at Oxon Hill, Md. He is believed to have fallen or suffered a heart attack while on a midnight walk.

Libraries to Close

All agencies of the District's Public Library will close at 6 p. m. today and remain closed on New Year's Day, Harry N. Peterson, librarian, announced yesterday.

Careful Identification by Veteran Can Help Reduce Error in Big VA Insurance Business

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

(Fourth of a Series.)

It is scarcely likely that the immense insurance industry of the United States could have been built to its present proportions on the basis on which Government insurance operates.

Between the home office and the customer in commercial insurance is a force of local agents in the field, men and women whose livelihood depends upon keeping the customer satisfied. The Veterans' Administration, on the other hand, must conduct practically all of its insurance business by mail.

That is a situation which leads to the vast bulk of misunderstandings, recriminations and unhappiness which have plagued National Service Life Insurance.

19,000 Smiths

In the Richmond branch office alone are more than 1,500,000 index cards bearng names of individuals who have had business with the office at one time or another. Among these are 19,000 Smiths. And the Smiths include 1000 John Smiths, among whom are 100 John E. Smiths.

Nobody can feel exclusive among these cards. Your correspondent found 750 Andrewses. E. Lee Trinkle, jr., who administers the insurance office for the VA in Richmond, discovered six Trinkles, and that is by no means a usual name.

It is not difficult to understand why names alone mean little in this great enterprise. The veteran who simply signs his name to a communication will wait for a reply while a search is made of the files under all similar names in an effort to tie him up with his case. Sometimes a connection simply cannot be established, and another critic of National Service Life Insurance is born to proclaim to the world the inefficiency of a Government bureau which won't answer his mail.

Form Envelope Helps

Checks and postal notes reach the Richmond office every day which contain no clew whatever to the account to which they are to be applied. Use of the form envelope for premium payments adopted by the VA obviates this trouble to a great extent, but there are some veterans who fail, for one reason or another, to use these envelopes.

Inevitably there are errors of administration in any enterprise which must depend upon human beings to perform part of its operations. In November Trinkle had one section of 10 clerks checked daily for errors. During that month this section handled 11,611 insurance accounts and made 195 errors.

These postal notes for payment on veterans' insurance policies arrived in the Richmond office unsigned. Since there are no names of the senders on the lines on the back, officials do not know which accounts to credit

The errors checked were separated into 21 categories, only four of which would ever be noticed by the veteran himself should they not be caught in the office; the others were purely administrative. Most frequent of the errors which would affect veterans were:

1. Failure to note change of address.
2. Issuing a receipt with an incorrect notation, such as the date.
3. Entering the wrong amount on the receipt or account card.

These errors, it should be noted, were discovered in the course of the normal checkup made of each operation. That is, even though 10 clerks did make 195 errors in 11,611 operations, none would have gone out of the office even if the survey were not being made.

Reasons for Error

The Richmond office, and consequently the veteran, still is bothered by premium payments which for some reason are not applied to the proper accounts within a reasonable time. In January, 1947, these unapplied remittances reached a peak of 105,000; by last November they had fallen to 2800, a figure which Trinkle concedes to be too high.

Reasons for these unapplied remittances are numerous. Chief among them are:

1. No account can be found. This is due usually to the fact that a veteran has moved into the Richmond branch area and begun paying his premiums there without notfying the branch office which has his records.
2. The account cannot be identified, usually because the remittance does not contain sufficient information and is not mailed in a VA premium envelope.
3. Payment by unsigned checks or postal notes.
4. Carelessness in the branch office.
5. Payment by someone other than the insured, when the payer does not identify the insured.

Counter Business Drops

Use of the VA premium envelope, which serves the double purpose of a notification of premium due and a means of tying the remittance to the proper account, has been greatly increased by constant publicity. Remittances mailed in plain envelopes has dropped from 49.6 per cent in September, 1946, to 9.1 per cent in November, while use of premium envelopes has increased in the same period from 49.4 per cent to 84.6 per cent.

Payments over the counter at branch and regional offices have followed a course which seems to indicate first loss of confidence and then increase of confidence in VA business methods. These payments in October, 1946, were 8.3 per cent. By February, 1947, they had increased to 13 per cent, apparently because veterans wanted a receipt for money they had paid the VA. By last November these payments had dropped to 6.3 per cent of the total.

No matter what the VA may do to increase the efficiency of its insurance operations, there are certain imponderables which affect its performance and which can be neither avoided nor calculated in advance. One of these is the movement of veterans from one district to another. Not quite so difficult but, at best, requiring a certain amount of clerical work, is the matter of movement within the district. Changes of address now average 10 per cent monthly.

Not only must the VA conduct its business of soliciting, receiving and posting premiums almost entirely by mail, in the infinitely more delicate and difficult task of adjudicating and paying death claims it must do the same. This brings new problems into the picture, with new complaints from another source.

(Tomorrow: Handling of claims, adjudication and payment.)

Man Sentenced For Molesting Girl by Phone

An unemployed janitor, charged with making four indecent proposals over the telephone to a young girl typist Wednesday, was sentenced to $25 or 60 days in jail at Municipal Court yesterday.

Detective Sergt. C. A. Goodman of the Sex Squad testified that Lafayette Washington, 24, of 33 Myrtle st. ne., called the 25-year-old brunette typist, a local real estate employe, four times in rapid succession.

The girl, Goodman told the court, finally agreed to meet Washington at the corner of N. Capitol and H. sts., and immediately notified police. Goodman made the arrest there as the defendant approached the woman's parked car.

In handing down the sentence, Judge John P. McMahon commented: "Here is a case where the maximum penalty does not measure up to the offense."

Religious Classes Face Test

week during school hours. To join the class, the child must have the written permission of his parent.

Classes are held in most cases in the elementary school's auditorium or "multi-purpose" rooms, never in classrooms. However, at the John Marshall School, 4751 N. 25th st., instruction is given in the Evangelical Reformed Brethren Church across the street, because the school auditorium is used for classes.

Last March's Supreme Court decision banned religious classes held once a week in Champaign, Ill. public schools. The court's majority decision pointed out that public buildings were used by the classes to spread religious doctrines, and said this violated "separation of church and state."

Last July, after studying the Supreme Court decision, Virginia Attorney General Lindsay Almond, jr. ruled that religious instruction classes in the State would be constitutional provided they are conducted away from the control of public schools.

And last August 10, the Arlington School Board voted to continue its practice of releasing pupils from classes to attend "noncompulsory, nonsectarian classes in religious education."

MacIntyre, chairman of the new Arlington group which challenges this stand, said the committee's first move will be to recruit a "representative membership" in nearby Virginia before going to the school board.

He said the organization membership currently is limited to Arlington, but may eventually expand its interests to include Alexandria.

Group secretary Mrs. William C. Levy, 603 Walter Reed dr., Arlington, said the membership is "substantial," but was unable to list the exact number.

Opposition to Arlington's religious instruction program came as "no surprise" to one of the three teachers, Mrs. William B. Davidson.

But, she said, "as far as we know, we are abiding by the Supreme Court decision as closely as possible."

She said the three teachers give instruction in all but four Arlington elementary schools—Shirley Homes and Fairlington, where the program was omitted because of parental opposition, and in Hume and Woodlawn, for lack of available space.

Another target of the new opposition group is the current Arlington public school practice of reciting a verse of the Bible in each classroom at the beginning of the school day.

Meantime, Glenn Archer, executive secretary of a national group, "Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State," said his organization is "investigating" the Arlington situation and may take action when its national executive committee meets January 26 in Washington.

Six-Guns Signal The Knell of '48

By Richard L. Coe

THE FIRST-RUN picture palazzos have lined up some juicy plums to usher in the New Year. The bills all look more lush than the recent Christmas presents, and you'll find special midnight showings at all the big houses tonight.

The Capitol yesterday stuck to its Thursday opening policy, thereby having the effect of jumping the gun on its brothers. "Yellow Sky" is the big Loew screen feature, with violence of the Old West portrayed by Gregory Peck, Anne Baxter and Richard Widmark. And the stage has two headline acts, the elegant dancing De Marcos and the indestructibly cheerful Gus Van.

"Yellow Sky" is one of those top-flight cast-production versions of life in the Old West, of which the waning year has brought so big a batch. The title refers to a town, to which six bank robbers have galloped across the salt marshes away from the law. Here they are greeted by one of those gals of stamina to which the screen only lately has begun to pay just tribute.

It is in these gals of guts and action for which the 1948 surge of elegant horse operas can take most pride. In the past we've had far too many helpless lassies standing helplessly by while the brawny guys do the fighting. Either that or they were shady creatures intent on supplying the needs of the boys in the back room, as Marlene Dietrich so eloquently sang.

This latest female stamina is acted by Anne Baxter, a lass with a powerful right, a little sure shot with the rifle (except, of course, at the critical point, when male superiority is given its accustomed sway). Anne is protecting her old grandpa's gold horde, hidden away in an abandoned mine, and she fights like a tiger.

Breaking up her resistance, in time-honored fashion, is Peck, whose previous horse opera experience was in "Duel in the Sun." When Meanie Richard Widmark tries to welch on an agreement with grandpa, James Barton, Peck rises to the challenge and pumps him full of lead.

"Yellow Sky," too, is notable in that it manages to give us, in bank robbery and sudden death, perpetrators who are not cast into the outer darkness of an unloved future by the Production Code. Precisely how and when the celebrated Code operates is still baffling, which is the most sensible way to treat its curious demands.

Alfred Newman's musical score is notable for keeping the symphonic sawing at a minimum. The picture opens with welcome quiet, the accent being on the silence necessary to a bank robbery and on the hoof beats as the gang speeds from the law. While the pace of Scripter Lamar Trotti and Director William A. Wellman is leisurely and sometimes downright pokey, "Yellow Sky" has been well made and Western fanciers of the newer breed probably will enjoy it.

THE DE MARCO'S skilled ballroom turns remain as wonderfully sleek as ever in the stage bill's top position. Gus Van's veteran approach to genial minstrelsy makes him the sure winner he always has been. Mary McClanahan holds down a spot with her versatile drum magic, and Bob Hammond's birds are on the bill to enchant admirers of our feathered friends.

"YELLOW SKY," a 20th Century-Fox picture produced by Lamar Trotti, directed by William A. Wellman, screenplay by Trotti from a story by W. R. Burnett. Photographed by Joe MacDonald. Music by Alfred Newman. At the Capitol.

TODAY'S new bills have the variety to satisfy the crowds . . . A big Metro musical arrives this morning at the Palace, "Words and Music," with the tunes of Rodgers and Hart sung and danced by June Allyson, Gene Kelly, Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Perry Como and Lena Horne . . . For light comedy there's the effortless Cary Grant in "Every Girl Should Be Married," in which modern fable he introduces a new leading lady, Betsy Drake . . . For swashbuckling fans, the Warner splits its day in two, showing "One Sunday Afternoon" through the 5:15 show only; the evening brings in the day's ideal swashbuckler, Errol Flynn, playing "The Adventures of Don Juan," a role once played by J. Barrymore.

THE HOLDOVERS all boast midnight showings tonight . . . The "new" Trans-Lux will be having one, as well as "Red Shoes" at the National and "Hamlet" at both the Playhouse and the Little . . . And you can be uptown at either the Ambassador for "Don Juan" or the Dupont for "Beauty and the Beast." . . . The K-B theaters will be midnight-showing at the Apex, Atlas, Senator and Naylor . . . Variety Clubbers will be holding forth, leading up to a 2 ayem breakfast.

SAMMY'S SONGBIRD — Laura Leslie will be chanting the lyrics to the Kaye orchestrations at tonight's special New Year Eve dance at the National Guard Armory. Tickets today downtown at Super Music City or the Willard Hotel Agency for this program, which will include Sammy's "So You Want to Lead a Band"

THREE MORE EXCEPTIONAL fetes are planned . . . The Hoosier Hot Shots will be headlining, with Grandpa Jones and Ramona, at Connie B. Gay's New Year dance and party, starting at 9 tonight in Turner's Arena . . . Sammy Kaye, as noted in that picture of Laura Leslie, will be swinging and swaying at the National Guard Armory from 10 until 2 . . . And the Gayety will be blowing full blast, with both a midnight show and a Milkman's Matinee at 2 ayem in honor of Headliner June St. Clair.

Crosby No. 1 at Boxoffice 5th Time

Hollywood, Dec. 30 (AP).—It's getting monotonous.

Bing Crosby, for the fifth straight year, walked off today with Motion Picture Herald's box office tabulation of the movies' best money-makers.

This is the first time any star has racked up so many wins in the poll's 17-year history.

As was the case last year, Betty Grable finished in the runner-up spot. It's the sixth time Betty has made the top 10. Abbott and Costello, after three years' absence from the lists, bounced back into third spot. Others, in order, are Gary Cooper, Bob Hope, Humphrey Bogart, Clark Gable, Cary Grant, Spencer Tracy and Ingrid Bergman.

Dear Dick:

Here's great news for cinematophiles! BEGINNING TOMORROW, for four weeks, we're bringing back some of the very best British films to the Hippodrome, in a BRITISH FILM FESTIVAL!

I'm listing below the dates, and pictures to be played:

Starting tomorrow;

Noel Coward's "BRIEF ENCOUNTER" and Noel Coward's "THIS HAPPY BREED"(Tech)

Week beginning Saturday, January 8;

"I KNOW WHERE I'M GOING" and "TAWNY PIPIT"

Week beginning Saturday, January 15;

"THE MIKADO" (Tech) and "THE MAGIC BOW"

Week beginning Saturday, January 22;

"THE BROTHERS" and "THE OVERLANDERS"

If these are received as well as we think they'll be, we'll have more to follow, soon!

Very truly yours,
Bernie

6 Police Officers Made Night Inspectors, 3 Promoted, 33 Transferred in Police Shakeup

In a sweeping special order by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, six night inspectors yesterday were relieved by six police lieutenants, three officers were promoted, and 33 transfers were made.

The change of night inspectors, whose job it is to watch other policemen in action, inaugurates a new policy of rotation every six months in the unpopular jobs. Every police lieutenant will serve six months as a night inspector, effective January 1.

The only two men transferred from the First Precinct were Sergt. Maurice F. Prestello and Pvt. Joseph F. Longo, both of whom were witnesses in the controversial Mitchell Grill case before the ABC Board.

Barrett denied there was any connection between the transfers and the case. Prestello was shifted to the Ninth Precinct and Longo to the Second.

Plainclothes private John J. Kinney of the Missing Persons Bureau was promoted to uniformed corporal in the Second Precinct. Corporal James J. Sadtler was promoted to sergeant and remains in the traffic division, and Precinct Detective Robert H. Wolf was promoted to corporal and transferred from the Fourteenth to the Eleventh Precinct.

Sixteen of the transfers have already been made, as long as seven weeks ago. Other changes are effective January 1.

The six new night inspectors, who work in pairs in plain clothes, are Lieut. George S. Eckels, Second Precinct; Lieut. Edward H. Sennott, Jr., traffic division; Lieut. Francis G. Pilkerton, Eleventh Precinct; Lieut. John O. Hite, Fourth Precinct; Lieut. Earl D. Noble, Eighth Precinct, and Lieut. Charles L. Langley, central communications record bureau.

The officers relieved of their present duties as night inspectors are Lieut. Karl G. McCormick, who goes to the Ninth Precinct; Lieut. Joseph H. Hunt, to the Second Precinct; Lieut. John J. Boyd, to the Traffic Division; Lieut. Samuel J. Prophet, to the Eleventh Precinct; Lieut. Daniel O. Fletcher, to the Eighth Precinct, and Lieut. Earl D. Alber, who goes to the Central Communications Record Bureau.

Lieut. Todd O. Thoman was transferred from the Ninth to the Eleventh Precinct.

Other transfers recorded in the special order are:

Sergeants: Bolivar N. Bradshaw from No. 7 to No. 11, Adelbert A. Schmidt from No. 12 to No. 9, Joseph L. Proctor from No. 11 to No. 1, Ulys S. Rogers from No. 11 to No. 7, Eula C. Helms from No. 9 to No. 5, and William L. Sanford from the Traffic Division to No. 11.

Corporals: Arnold F. Jackson, from No. 13 to No. 12; James B. Jones from No. 12 to No. 6; Herman A. Sauer, from No. 2 to No. 13; Marcel Caussin, from No. 6 to the Traffic Division, and David B. Rowell, from No. 11 to No. 9.

The transfer of Pvt. Frank Manthos, "one-man vice squad," another key witness in the Mitchell grill case, from No. 1 to No. 6 was made permanent.

Patrolmen Shifted

Other privates transferred included: Harry C. Lee, from No. 2 to the Traffic Division; Tinsman T. Seymour, from No. 4 to No. 14; Amos C. Stanford, from No. 9 to No. 2; Charles V. Harvey, from No. 2 to No. 9; William B. Widmer, from No. 6 to the Traffic Division; Harold B. Landon, from the Traffic Division to No. 6; [illegible] No. 14 to the Traffic Division, and Richard White, from No. 6 to No. 14; Norman F. Allison, from No. 7 to No. 4; Robert Reeves, from No. 4 to No. 7; Richard F. Brown Jr., from No. 3 to the Traffic Division; Miles J. Richer, from No. 4 to No. 7, and Edward F. Brown, from No. 10 to No. 3.

Testimony Is Reassessed

over that of other police witnesses because he had been detailed to that assignment specifically and therefore was in a better position to observe than officers who, "it appeared, casually dropped in there."

Also, he pointed out, some of the police witnesses were wearing their uniforms, "in which case things at the grill would quiet down." Payne said he believed the First Precinct policemen who testified they saw no ABC law violations were "testifying honestly."

Payne said that "as far as I am concerned, and the board, too, I think the case s closed."

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett made the same statement after conferring with the Commissioners at their semiweekly session yesterday morning. He denied reports published elsewhere that he might have asked for a reopening of the case.

John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, also denied this report and added the matter was closed, so far as the Commissioners were concerned, too.

The Mitchell Grill management was originally cited on 57 charges, the largest number ever heard by ABC, and was found guilty on 41 of them by the ABC board after a dramatic hearing. Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, chief defense witness, created a sensation at the hearing when he accused the main prosecution witness, Private Wallace, of engineering a "frameup" of the grill.

On the Town

OLMSTED'S, the G st. eating place, is staying open tomorrow, New Year's Day. Hours are noon until 10 p.m.

Rita

Rita Dimitriou, song singer at the Old New Orleans, tonight is celebrating one year in the United States. Coming over from Greece, she opened in the Sazerac Room last New Year's Eve.

New Year's Eve minimums this year are ranging from 0 to $12 Tariff at River Bend on Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. is $5 per person, tax included.

"Meet the Girls," it says here, at the Lotus, where the price tonight will be $6.60 each. For that you get Duke Art and Junior, Hess and Gray, Dorice Shaw, Buddy Shaner and Jack Corry's Orchestra, and the Jean Davis "De Lovelies."

It said in this space the other day that Sammy Kaye and band will be at the Statler next week to do some recording and some special broadcasts. Well, it won't be Sammy Kaye; it'll be Kay Kyser. Excuse it, please.

DINNER is $7.50 and the entertainment includes Victoria Rane and Dana Slepoushkin at the Balalaika tonight.

There had to be, sooner or later, a foursome called "Three B's and a Bop." Well, such an outfit has bobbed up and is at Duke Ellington's tonight with Dusty Fletcher, Martha Short and some other people. A new review, "Harlemania," also is on the bill.

Jack Rowe's "Southeast's liveliest fun spot," is featuring Louise Potter, billed as "a ton of fun," and the Manhattan Trio for its New Year's Eve reveling. . . . Dinner is $2.25 and $2.50 at the Dragon, 1329 G st. nw., tonight. . . . At Detta's Musical Bar on Marlboro pike you'll find Ola Mae Bishop, Gene Bell, and the Tune-twisters . . . There's a T-bone for $1.50 at Aaron's, 1524 K st. nw.

At Normandy Farms, Graffenreid Woolley and Yvonne Verhaine of the junior league will entertain dinner guests and New Year's Eve celebrators with their popular puppet show. Dinner at the Farms tonight runs from $5 to $7, plus tax.

Son of Fords Named

Detroit, Dec. 30 (AP).—A son born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford 2d, today was named Edsel Bryant Ford 2d, after the late Edsel Bryant Ford, father of Henry 2d.

Redskins Admit They Want Bryant

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Dec. 30.—If at first you don't succeed, don't bother to try again and everything will be all right; at least that has been the wonderful experience of Carl Snavely, the North Carolina head coach, who will send his football team against Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl on Saturday.

POVICH

The reason that Mr. Snavely has an unbeaten Carolina team and a guarantee of $100,000 for its day's work on New Year's afternoon, is Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice. There may be a greater football player in the United States but North Carolina people will dispute it to their last breath. But I am getting away from the fabric of Snavely's success, which, as I mentioned was compounded from failure.

Back in 1944, Snavely had little interest in North Carolina. He was the head coach at Cornell, and among his interests was a Bainbridge Naval Training Station halfback named Charlie Justice, who was running wild in the tough wartime service league. Snavely envisioned him as the best tail-back in Cornell's history and he held out to Justice the numerous advantages of education at Cornell, but the lad was highly disinterested in any Northern college.

And so it came to pass that Snavely himself transferred to North Carolina U. and there to his glee he found the boy he couldn't persuade to go to Cornell, and to put it mildly it has been a happy comradeship.

JUSTICE DOES EVERYTHING for Carolina except lug the water bucket. He runs, passes, kicks, plays safety and relaxes the rest of the ball club. Carolina folks will debate violently any claim that there has ever been a more tremendous triple threat back; not since records were kept, at least. Choo Choo has averaged 5.2 yards every time he has carried the ball. He has completed 52 per cent of his passes. He just broke the National collegiate record for average punting distance.

He's modest about the whole business, though. Today at the Carolina workout at Hammond, La., he pointed to his backfield buddy, Hosea Rodgers, and said, "There's the big guy on our ball team. He carries the ball more than I do. I get away with murder because they have to keep an eye on Hosea. I had to make good this season because next year I won't have Hosea playing alongside me."

They're the Messrs. Inside and Outside of Carolina's single-wing offense, Rodgers and Justice. The 190-pound Rodgers, as fullback, takes the ball from center and with the threat of Justice hitting the flanks and spreading the defense, he smashes up the middle. And then with the defenses improperly indoctrinated, he hands off to the 165-pound Justice for those quick cuts to the outside.

SNAVELY IS A top exponent of the single-wing, but he isn't wedded to it. He says. "Any day I am convinced that the T-formation can score more points, I'll shift to the T." But he hasn't been convinced yet. He has kept records for eight years and defies you to prove that the T-teams can outscore the good single-wing clubs. Anyway, he doesn't like the brush-blocking of the T-formation, and prefers the crash-bang of the single-wing.

New Orleans is proudly claiming to have the best of the New Year's Day bowl games, and perhaps that claim is justified. It pits Justice, the best punter in the United States against Jack Mitchell, of Oklahoma, the best punt-returner in the Nation. It sends the tremendous running game of Oklahoma against a team that has yielded only two touchdowns running, all season. It's a prime test of the good single-wing against the finest split-T formation.

THE PREGAME moaning of the two coaches, Snavely and Bud Wilkinson, failed to register with Adolph Rupp, Kentucky's famed basketball coach, who was a speechmaker at the New Orleans Quarterback Club today. "Snavely is telling how great Oklahoma is, and Wilkinson is saying how Carolina outclasses his team. They're saying they wish they had what the other guy has. Well, all they have to do is change teams and they'd both be happy."

Wally Webber told the story of Harry Stuhldreher, the Wisconsin coach, who was berating his team between halves this season, complaining about the line play particularly. "Line play is important," Stuhldreher told a second string guard, "You know where most games are lost, don't you?" The guard looked up from his locker and answered brightly, "Sure, Coach, right here at Wisconsin."

The town this week is full of football stories like the one about the referee who called a holding penalty against the Bears. "You stink," howled a Bear lineman. Whereupon the referee made no answer until he paced off 15 yards and then said, "And how do I smell from here?"

Caps Storm To 81-68 Win Over St. Louis

St. Louis, Dec. 30.—Washington's Caps emphatically ended their longest losing streak of the season (two games), walloping the St. Louis Bombers, 81-68, here tonight in a BAA game.

The Caps regained their winning touch by setting a torrid first half pace that enabled them to grab a 42-26 lead. St. Louis was unable to bag a field goal for the first seven minutes and by then was far out of it.

After intermission, Buddy O'Grady tried to get the home team back in it, dropping four pretty set shots. But the winners met the challenge with two long ones by Johnny Norlander and three additional field goals by Bob Feerick.

Feerick resumed his old high-scoring role tonight, bagging nine field goals and two fouls for 20 points. Bones McKinney, leading pointmaker for the season, was held to a lone basket and three fouls.

Kentucky Beaten by St. Louis

Score: 42 to 40

New Orleans, Dec. 30 (AP).—St. Louis University won the Sugar Bowl basketball championship tonight, coming from behind in the closing moments to turn back Kentucky's national collegiate champions, 42-40, in the finals of the four-team tournament.

It was the seventh straight triumph of the current season for St. Louis, winner of the National Invitation Tournament in New York last spring, and the first loss in nine starts for Kentucky.

Easy Ed Macauley, the All-American beanpole, and Lou Lehman, a bearcat of a guard, were the big guns in the second half comeback which wiped out a fine nine-point St. Louis deficit just in time to beat the final bell.

Tulane captured third place in the tournament by outlasting Holy Cross, 81-79, in the consolation game between the two first round losers.

Texans Wins In Sugar Races

New Orleans, Dec. 30 (AP).—Athletes from Texas and Louisiana schools dominated the Sugar Bowl track meet here today, two victories out of the five events going to each of those states.

Paul Bienz of Tulane, who calls Fort Wayne, Ind., his home and Tulane his alma mater, equalled the meet record of 9.9 in winning the 100-yard dash. No other marks were threatened.

Jerry Thompson of Texas, won the mile run, as expected, in 4 minutes, 20.9 seconds. The mile relay went to Texas A. and M.'s team of D. R. Mitchell, Connally Ludwick, E. G. Bilderback and C. R. Hombrook. Their time was 3 minutes 21.4 seconds.

JACK NICHOLS OF CAPS
New 6-foot-7 player arrives

Caps' Jack Nichols

All He Wants for New Year's Day Is Two Size 14 Sneakers

Big Jack Nichols, the Caps' latest acquisition, has the feet to go with his 6-foot 7-inch frame.

The Helms Foundation All-America center from the University of Washington arrived at National Airport yesterday from Seattle and firmly planted his size 14 brogans on the ground.

They took Manager Paul Rothgeb off guard and Nichols was unable to work out while Rothgeb searched furiously for a pair of king-sized basketball shoes.

Latest report is that Nichols will be shod properly tomorrow night for his initial appearance against the Chicago Stags.

Nchols, solidly built 225-pounder, has been creating a stir in West Coast basketball circles since 1943 when he started out with Washington. He spent two years at Southern California while in the Navy's V-12 program then reentered Washington in 1946-47.

Oregon State's Red Rocha, now with the St. Louis Bombers, beat him out for the conference scoring honors, 215 to 204. But last year, Nichols really hit his stride, captaining the Huskies to the Pacific Coast Conference title.

Nichols set an all-time Washington scoring mark with 507 points in 34 games and set a new league mark of 265 points in 16 games. His top total was 39 scored against Idaho.

They're Mad Too

Miamians Get Only 8000 Bowl Tickets

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MIAMI BEACH, FLA., DEC. 30.—There was a lot of enthusiasm here tonight over Saturday's Georgia-Texas Orange Bowl football game, but very little of it was manifested by the local citizenry.

The explanation is smiple—very few Miamians will get to see the game. Of the 60,000 tickets sold, it is estimated less than 15 per cent were available to the home town folks.

This, of course, doesn't stand in well with Miamians who have nursed the Orange Bowl game from its meager beginning in 1935 when only 5900 turned out.

They feel they are due more consideration by Orange Bowl officials, and are not keeping their complaints silent. Many year-around residents with whom this reporter has talked said they sent in their checks and money orders the first day tickets were placed on sale, eight months ago.

Most of them said their checks were returned because "they were received too late." On the other hand, many out of towners requested and received their tickets as late as November 1, the chagrined Miamians charge.

The two competing schools, Texas and Georgia, received 15,000 tickets between them for their alumni and friends. Of the 45,000 remaining tickets, only about 8000 are sold in Miami. Where do the other 37,000 tickets go?

"THEY GO TO politicians and speculators," said a local hotel clerk. "I don't say that the Orange Bowl people sell tickets to speculators knowingly," he added, "but the specs sure manage to wind up with thousands of them. You can get a ticket today if you want to spend $35.00 for a $6.00 seat, but that's too rich for my blood.

"Several weeks ago, one of the five Miami City commissioners offered 300 Orange Bowl tickets for sale" the clerk continued. "If he got 300, certainly the other four commissioners must have been alloted 300 each. That's 1,500 for the city commissioners alone. And there are

Tatum, Butts Tried to Slate Grid Game Here

Miami Beach, Fla. Dec. 30.—Coach Wally Butts of Georgia's Orange Bowl Bulldogs today disclosed he was forced to turn down an offer to play Maryland in Washington next November.

Butts said he and Maryland Coach Jim Tatum had been dickering for a Georgia-Maryland game for several weeks, but were unable to agree on a suitable date.

"The only date Maryland had available was November 19," Butts explained, "but I ruled that out. I don't want my team playing a club as tough as Maryland should be a week before our game with Georgia Tech. Tech plays an easy game the week before the game with us and so will we."

Butts, however, said there is still a good possibility of Georgia and Maryland starting a home-and-home series in 1950. He said he planned to continue his talks with Tatum next month at the NCAA meeting in San Francisco.

Georgia and Maryland played to a 20-20 tie in last January's Gator Bowl game.

Acceptance Of Coaching Job Entirely Up to Him

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The next head coach of the Washingtin Redskins will be Paul (Bear) Bryant, if he wants the job.

That was admitted in all quarters, except Bryant's, yesterday as the question of who will succeed Turk Edwards came within a signature on a contract of being answered.

Redskin President George Marshall said he hoped to sign the "best coach in the country" and in the next breath said Bryant was the best coach in the country.

In Lexington, Ky., a spokesman told the Associated Press that Bryant had been offered a fat Redskin contract for twice the salary he gets for coaching the Wildcats. Bryant, however, declined to confirm or deny the report.

Commenting on the Lexington story, Redskin General Manager Dick McCann said:

Don't Want to Tamper

"Yes, Bryant is the man Marshall wants."

"But," continued McCann, "I can't say that Bryant was offered a contract with the Redskins. We do not want to tamper with coaches. The matter was merely discussed with Bryant. It is up to him from here in."

Marshall, however, was making no secret of his desire to have the big former Maryland coach at the Redskin helm in '49. During a long interview with The Washington Post's reporter, who professed some knowledge of Kentucky's feeling toward Bryant, Marshall asked several times whether it would be possible for Bryant to get out of a 10-year Kentucky contract with no ill will on either side.

Asked if a possible hitch in bringing Bryant to Washington was the length of the conract offered, Marshall said:

"I'd give Paul as long a contract as he wanted."

[The Lexington spokesman said Bryant was offered an eight-year term for a sum around $25,000 a year.]

Some Other Considerations

Other considerations, however, are thought to be swaying Bryant's decision as to whether he shall join the 'Skins. He might want to turn in at least one brilliant season before leaving Kentucky. His teams have lost three games each of the three years he's been there. He might be under obligations to his staff of assistants, some of whom he could not bring to Washington. Finally, Bryant's family might prefer to live in Kentucky.

Marshall continues to bring up the name of Frank Leahy, Notre Dame's highly publicized coach, strengthening the rumor he might be lured to Washington.

"We almost had him once," the Redskin boss bragged. "We might be able to get him next year."

"Would you be willing to pay the $25,000 Leahy would demand?" Marshall was asked.

"Leahy isn't that expensive," he hedged.

Rube McCray of William and Mary and Buff Donelli of Boston University were mentioned, but again and again Marshall came back to Bryant.

"Wouldn't he make a fine coach for the Redskins?" he asked.

Early Wynn Safe As Boat Cracks Up at Florida

Venice, Fla., Dec. 30.—Early Wynn, former Nat pitcher recently traded to Cleveland, lost a luxurious new cabin cruiser here today in his second nearly disastrous boating mishap of the year.

The big right-hander was fishing in the Gulf of Mexico with J. L. Dunn, 21-year-old nephew, when a sudden squall hit. Wynn managed to make a 3-mile dash inside the Venice jetties but then plowed into a hidden rock and his craft immediately sank.

Wynn and his nephew swam to nearby rocks and made their way ashore.

Wynn and his wife, the former Loraine Follin of College Park, arrived only two days ago. The $18,000 boat, Lo-Jo, was built at Shady Side, Md., and the Wynns sailed here from there.

It was believed that the craft will be almost a total loss but Wynn was said to have insured it before he left Washington.

While fishing with another relative, Earl Byron, a brother-in-law, Wynn had a narrow escape here last spring. Byron's 26-foot boat burned after an explosion and he and Wynn had to swim 150 yards to shore.

Kansas Loses To Oklahoma

Kansas City, Dec. 30 (AP). — A southpaw hook shot by Paul Courty with a minute and a half remaining proved the winning basket as Oklahoma's Sooners defeated the Kansas Jayhawks, 52 to 49, for the Big Seven Conference tournament championship tonight.

More than 9200 fans piled in Municipal Auditorium to see the nip-and-tuck battle that was decided after the score had been tied 16 times. Wayne Glasgow, Oklahoma sophomore, led the well balanced Sooner attack with 12 points, although long Bob Petersen scored 17 for Kansas.

As Abe Greene Looks to '49:

Boxing Game Must Brace to Meet Its Greatest Menace—Television

(Abe J. Greene, managing editor of the Paterson (N. J.) Evening News and national commissioner of the NBA, has written a year-end forecast for the Associated Press for many years. Here is his 1949 forecast.)

By Abe J. Greene
National Commissioner of the NBA

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 30 (AP).—Pugilana, hardiest of all sports in the matter of weathering of storms, faces a new threat, most serious of all, as it looks to the new year.

Having come off the ropes through the years from the assaults of fake-artists, district attorney investigations and bribe scandals, boxing now is confronted with tele-menace, a new force which might well render it as dead as the dodo bird.

More serious even than the dearth of good fighters and anemia of the box office is the threat of the latest of modern gadgets which is giving promoters cold chills and promisng to send ambitious knuckle-artists scurrying to other fields to flex their abilities.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, says two million television sets will be turned out in 1949. By 1953, he foresees five millions sets produced annually for coast-to-coast networks.

The result will be so many more home hearth and tavern referees, but a corresponding slump in the ringside bugs.

Fighters don't fight on a cut of every glass of beer sold, nor on the hospitality of the neighborhood host.

For every tin ear, there must be a purse. Also, as an essential corollary, there have been few instances of promoters who revel in an empty house. It's bad for sagging bankrolls, an affliction of which there has been sadly growing evidence in the past year.

It isn't enough to say, as do television sages, that video is going to make a lot of new fans.

Look what radio did, they cheer fight men. But television is to radio as, for instance, Joe Louis is to Johnny Paychek. The resemblance fades with the mere mention.

With radio, you merely listen and hear a machine-gun voice rattle off a lot of punches. If you know fights, you follow the announcer. If you haven't seen a scrap, it's mumbo-jumbo. Television gives the homeside spectator a ringside seat which he can't get unless he's among the 400 Garden millionaires or a reasonable facsimile thereof.

The expedient of cutting main event fighters into a small slice of the promoters' television payoff just won't do. New York main-eventers get a $272 melon. That isn't the answer because, with gates badly slumping, it's like buying a quarter for a buck.

But it isn't the effect of video on any one given television show that's so devastating. A mere drop in the gate at Madison Square Garden alone is only a momentary defection which Uncle Mike Jacobs and the Garden probably can hurdle.

It is what such television shows do to the hinterlands that counts. For instance, if a good fight is televised from Washington, the fight club in Newark or Richmond Hills or Pawtucket is badly dented.

There isn't a fight club in New Jersey, for instance, which can compete with Garden television on Friday night. When Beau Jack

Haefner Ready After Operation

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

MICKEY HAEFNER, Nats' southpaw writing to Vice President Cal Griffith, discloses he underwent an operation, but is feeling shipshape now and expects to have a big season . . . referred to as a "half pint" by a heckler in 1945, Haefner replied, "I'll be around when the 10-gallon guys are gone." He was right.

Haight

Mickey's the only player on the field that day who is still with the club . . . according to my hunter friends, the Mallard duck is the only one not fooled by the duck blinds and decoys set out from the shore. You can get an occasional shot at one, but not because the bird is going to land near the shooters. Some ducks are so anxious to get with the decoys that they swim in from considerable distance . . . by the way, did you know it is illegal to shoot a duck on the water? . . . There's a filly on the West Coast with the name of "Uname It." Breeder C. T. Clifford sent in 27 names for her which were rejected for one reason or another, the Jockey Club registrar finally approving the twenty-eighth try . . . when wire recorders first came on the market, racketeers went into action right away. They cut a wire to a bookie joint, recorded the "service" results, held them up for a minute and then played them into the poolroom. The stolen interval was long enough to allow confederates to slip in sure thing bets. Several spots were clipped for thousands this way . . . Heywood Hale Broun says the college elevens are not scheduling Notre Dame and Trenton State for different reasons. The Irish are too good, he writes, and Trenton State, unable to win in 36 starts, is being shunned because no college wants to get the adverse publicity which would come with Trenton State's first victory in 10 years.

THE WASHINGTON CAPS, setting the pace in their league, are far down the list in all statistics, including the much-discussed attendance. The Caps haven't one player in the first 10 scorers which proves they must be a teamwork club . . . Marcel Cerdan's fistic success in this country is causing a rush of European ring talent to our shores. Latest arrival is Robert Villemain, French middleweight. He's another of those guys who has never been knocked down in umpteen fights, etc. . . . the Florida racetracks root for cool weather regardless of the desires of the Miami Chamber of Commerce. When temperatures are too low for sunbathing and seadunking, the visitors find racing and drinking are the only afternoon sports in town . . . Jockey Carson Kirk, who began his saddle career at Charles Town, gave his old friends up that way a look-see when he rode Roman Boy to victory. Kirk couldn't need the money. The Silver Spring boy was on the winner of 9 of the 28 stakes run on the flat in Maryland last fall, his top mount being H. L. Straus' Pilaster, five-time winner and the Nation's distance champ . . . betting at Havre de Grace during 1948 was seven million off the 1947 total . . . Snowden Carter, Baltimore Evening Sun, was the only Maryland handicapper to have a perfect day this year. He turned in 8 winners for 8 on November 12, final day at Pimlico and had the laugh on his pressbox rivals whom he trailed by a wide margin for the meeting.

MANAGER JOE KUHEL expects to come up with at least one dependable Nat pitcher from a trio of youngsters. There are Righthander Dick Weik, 21, from Chattanooga; Lefthander Macon Leeper, 20, from Atlanta and Southpaw Earl Davis, 19, from Charlotte . . . by the way, Nats Prexy Clark Griffith leaves for Florida next week. Nats' baseball school opens at Winter Garden on January 10 . . . I thought most of the rockfish (striped bass) were in the Chesapeake Bay. However, word comes from my friends at The Carolinian at Nags Head, N. C., pointing out that Capt. W. H. Larkin made 22 trips during the fall and sportsmen aboard his boat landed 3241 pounds of rockfish . . . A. F. DeGreve, Washington nimrod took down first prize for the largest Amberjack in the Sencba 1948 fishing rodeo, annual North Carolina competition. He landed a 60-pounder . . . as a 2-year-old, Donor was an ugly duckling as horses go. The son of Challedon was so unpromising that Trainer Preston Burch had trouble getting a groom who would care for the youngster. Burch started Donor the first time in a $3500 claiming race. No horseman thought enough of him to take him even at that cheap price. However, Donor proved that speed, rather than looks, is convincing and won seven races during that year, five of them stakes, and earned $69,515. He won the 1946 Butler Handicap to bring his three-season earnings to a healthy $261,910. Expensive presents sometimes arrive in poorly wrapped packages.

Team Beats PBC, 59-34, In Semifinal

Pint-sized Boots Manley stole the show from the big boys last night as the Boys Club of Washington Christmas basketball tournament reached the semifinal stage at the Eastern Branch gym.

Boots pegged in 29 points to lead Alexandria Boys Club 80-pound team to a 59-34 victory over Eleventh Precinct Police Boys Club. Alexandria gained the right to play Eastern Branch for the 60-pound title Monday at 5 p. m. at Eastern.

Larry (Blackie) Selwyn, former Central High and American U. player, flipped in 14 points as his Eastern Branch 135-pound class teammates whipped the Fifth Precinct Police Boys Club, 49-39. He received scoring help from Johnny Koustenis, another former Central star who made 12. Eastern plays Alexandria Tuesday for the 135-pound crown.

In other semifinals last night, the Eastern 90-pounders whipped Virginia Avenue playground, 38-19, and the Georgetown 120-pounders defeated Alexandria, 40-37. In the only quarterfinal of the evening, Eastern walloped No. 11 Precinct, 65-35.

'Round Our Town

2d Army Wins 19 of 20; 40 Games to Go

While most of the service and college basketball teams are pausing for their second breath, the Second Army quintet has already played what amounts to a complete schedule.

The team which plays out of Fort Meade, Md., has played 20 games, and won 19 of them. It's season isn't nearly over though. Forty more games are on tap against such foes as the Washington and Lee University varsity, and the jayvee teams of Georgetown, George Washington, Navy and West Point.

Coached by Maj. Valentine Lentz, prewar West Point court mentor, the Second Army has averaged better than 65 points per game, and lost only to East Stroudsberg, Pa., State Teachers.

Leading the Soldiers in the scoring column is Bill Chaff, 6-foot 3-inch center, formerly of the University of West Virginia, with 210 points. Rounding out the first five are Ted Kachnowski, Jack Loring, Dominic Antonelli and Ray Newman. Kachnowski and Lohring commute to Fort Meade practice sessions from the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, where they are stationed.

Making a comeback after a postwar drop in athletic activities, Fort Meade has scheduled 19 baseball games against college foes. The soldiers will meet Dartmouth, Colgate, Virginia, Georgetown and Washington and Lee.

Clean Sweep?

First-half champion Sugar Radio has its eyes on a clean sweep to the Washington Suburban Soccer League title when it opens second-half play against Pan American Sunday at 16th and Kennedy sts. nw.

In five other Sunday 2:30 p.m. games, Martim's Bakery plays the Sons of Italy at 34th and Benning rd., ne.; Charles County meets Glasva at Waldorf school; Rockville clashes with Maryland Sports Club at 7100 Walker Hill rd.; Washington French travels to Indian Head, Md.; and Columbia is host to Marlboro at 24th and Constitution ave. n.w.

No Cap Benefit

A mid-January basketball game, which would have pitted the Washington Caps against the four top college teams of the District, was vetoed yesterday by President Maurice Podoloff of the Basketball Association of America.

Podoloff said he must enforce a BAA rule which states that no member team may play an exhibition game during the regular season. Proceeds of the proposed game would have gone to the March of Dimes fund.

Georgetown, George Washington, Maryland and American Universities each would have played a 10-minute quarter against the Caps, according to the plans of the Touchdown Club, sponsor of the game.

Perhaps we need an Old Year Resolution

THE YEAR'S END is a traditional time for stock-taking in business.

So perhaps this may be a good time to present, for what they are worth, some observations on all business—on our economic system as a whole.

Today, America is carrying a sick world on its shoulders. So far, that is largely an act of simple humanity.

But in that act there is both proof and promise:

FIRST—proof that the system of economy we have built up in this country must be incredibly strong and vital.

SECOND—a clear and reasonable promise that, as the world gets well and the burden is reduced, this system of ours can give to all of us more of the things we want than we have today—more than we, or anyone else, have ever had before.

NOW—WHAT DO WE WANT?

In general, most of us want two things.

We want, first of all, food, clothes, houses. We want a chance to earn security for our families and ourselves.

And secondly, we want everyone in this country to have a chance to win more than simple security.

We want, for ourselves and our sons and our daughters, a promise that, if we're good enough, we can accumulate independent means, become leaders in government, business, medicine—any field that we choose.

We want to know that in America no man is barred from the top. We want the escalator to keep moving 24 hours a day—and be open to all.

The old argument that security and opportunity cannot live together has been settled. We have in this country the greatest combination of security and opportunity the world has known. Our job is to keep it.

And we can keep it, if all the major groups which make up this wonderful system of ours—government, management, labor, agriculture—will team up and work together for the good of all. We can keep this a land of both security and opportunity if we, as a people, will obey the rules.

THE RULES DON'T CHANGE

Times change.

But the rules by which free men and nations must succeed or fail do not. If we fail to reward initiative, gumption, good ideas and willingness to work, we will destroy those qualities—and with them, the security for both the nation and the individual, which we all seek.

For there is no economic formula which can protect a people who have lost ambition, or in whom inertia and selfishness have taken deep root.

Some 170 years ago, Americans resolved to make this country the kind of place where the height to which a man could rise was limited only by his own ability.

On the strength of that resolution, we prospered as no other people ever have.

Because of the promise that it held, multitudes from all over the world came here with hope in their hearts—and saw the promise fulfilled.

Perhaps the time has come to renew that old-time resolution.

D. C. Welfare Board Report Points Out Its Failures

Slow, Inadequate Service Is Cited, With Lack of Funds And Staff Blamed

By John London
Post Reporter

A desperately needy person applying for public assistance in the District has to wait three to four weeks—just to get an interview with a social worker.

If he does get relief, eventually, no allowance is made for a special diet, even if it is prescribed by a doctor as urgently necessary.

These are but two instances of how the Board of Public Welfare finds that it fails in some of its responsibilities to the needy of the District—because of inadequate funds and personnel.

Based on 1946 Costs

Other instances which highlight a report indorsed yesterday by the board:

An assistance grant is based on 1946 costs of living—reduced by an arbitrary 7 per cent.

And a family gets no public assistance if the head of the family is under a court order to support them, though he fails to do so.

There is no Federal Diary today because of Columnist Jerry Kluttz's illness.

No matter how great the need, no family as a general rule gets more than $160 a month.

Moreover, a family gets no public assistance if the head of the family is employable even though he cannot find work. Assistance is also denied any individual who is employable but cannot for any of a number of reasons find work.

Increase in Burden

The report stressing these inadequacies was prepared by Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant director, and will be presented to the January meeting of the Family and Children's Section, of the United Community Services.

Because the Welfare Board has had to jettison some of its load, an increased burden has been shunted onto private welfare agencies, themselves handicapped because of Community Chest campaign failures.

In explaining this aspect of the survey to a reporter, Clapp observed that "indigents are being forced to shop around from agency to agency, private and public." One private agency, he noted, employes two members of its eight-member staff to explain to applicants why all cases cannot be cared for.

As a result of the cuts in Welfare Board funds, private agencies have been called upon for three principal types of assistance which they consider the board's functions, the report states. These include:

Temporary aid to persons awaiting processing of their applications for public assistance; assistance to persons who have not established District residence, who may not have legal residence elsewhere; basic or supplementary aid in urgent cases.

Clapp's report points out, further, that there are two types of cases where neither public nor private agencies fill the void: Aged persons with relatives who can, but do not support them, and families with full-time earnings which are not adequate to meet their often urgent needs.

Ironically, the report points out, the Board of Public Welfare "fails to meet fully what are believed to be its legal responsibilities," although the District has one of the highest income averages in the United States and one of the lowest relief loads in proportion to population.

Only one State spends less per inhabitant for public assistance than the District which spends $3.44. The national average is $11. Twenty-seven States spend 3 to 10 times more than the District per inhabitant, the report reveals.

TWO-HEADED REALITY—This beastie is not to be classified with pink elephants. It's real. You're looking at it. It's there and is not something some persons may see after New Year's Eve. Should you be reaching for the headache pills Saturday morning, think what it would be like to have two heads, both aching

Board Urges Stone as Head Of Child Home

Assistant Will Fill Superintendent's Post Pending Appointment

Appointment of William J. Stone as superintendent of the District Receiving Home for Children was recommended to the Commissioners yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare.

Stone, 34, a lawyer and Navy combat veteran, has been assistant superintendent since August 25, 1947. He will serve as acting superintendent, beginning January 1, pending appointment of a superintendent by the Commissioners.

The resignation of Dr. William H. Stavsky as superintendent becomes effective tonight. His plans to have psychologists and psychiatrists determine the root of the individual child's difficulty were shelved for lack of funds and facilities available to the Receiving Home.

Dr. Stavsky has accepted a position as an assistant superintendent at the Wisconsin School for Boys.

Although current plans call for the Receiving Home "running along pretty much as is," the staff does hope eventually to institute a classification center such as Dr. Stavsky envisioned, Stone said yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Receiving Home for Children will not be able to move into the new building on Mo move into the new building on Mount Olivet rd. ne. until about February. Rain and resulting mud have impeded construction of the home's roads, Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant director of the Board of Public Welfare, explained.

3 Store Breaks Believed Work Of Same Person

Housebreakings, believed by police to have been the work of the same person, were reported yesterday by three Southeast businessmen.

Frederick Nessen, 43, owner of Nessen's 5 and 10 cent store, 419 8th st. se., said $303 was taken from the store after a skylight was forced. Of the loot, $223 was taken from a locked safe, $60 from a desk drawer and $20 from a cash register, he said.

The Grand Cafe, 1442 Pennsylvania ave. se., was entered, owner Elias M. David said, and three cases of whisky valued at $75, and other merchandise and cash taken.

Nicholas J. Digiovanni, cafe owner of 135 B st. se., reported his place was entered and $56 taken from a cash register, $4 from a juke box and several bottles of whisky.

Rector Boy Makes Gradual Progress Following Relapse

After a nearly fatal relapse Wednesday night when his temperature soared to 105, four-year-old Michael Rector was reported to be regaining lost ground gradually at Casualty Hospital last night.

Temperature of the young burn victim dropped to 100-101 late yesterday but his condition continued serious. His surgeon had to abandon plans for further skin grafts.

The "unknown factor," his surgeon said, was the possible effects of burn toxins on the lad's kidneys, liver and brain. To counteract the poisons and anemia, Michael has been receiving penicillin, liver extract and folic acid, as well as vitamins and a high protein diet.

Two-Headed Terrapin Made Well by Rays

"Super Diamond," reputedly the only two-headed terrapin in captivity, is recovering from an almost fatal case of lethargy today in the Department of Commerce Aquaruim.

The tiny freak, no bigger than a silver dollar and weighing less than an ounce, owes its life to daily 15-minute ultra-violet ray treatments and a special diet of raw sheep's liver.

About two months ago, according to Aquarium Director John C. Pearson, "Super Diamond" started to go to seed in a hurry. It grew listless and slept most of the time. Pearson despaired of its life, knowing it had exceeded by six months its life expectancy of one year.

Heads at Cross Purposes

Chelonologists—experts on terrapin life—were summoned, and today are credited by Pearson with saving "Super Diamond's" life by prescribing the sun lamp and sheep's liver.

Now, it is active again with such results as these:

One head grabs food being swallowed by the other, although the food is presumably headed for the same stomach.

Occasionally, the right foreleg and head start off in one direction, where the left head and leg refuse to go.

Sometimes one head wants to sleep when the other head doesn't.

Found Off North Carolina

"Super Diamond" was found in the summer of 1947 in the sands off the shores of North Carolina. Only one other twin-topped terrapin, according to Pearson, has been known to science. It was found 15 years ago, also in North Carolina, but lived only 12 months, he said.

Pearson now has revised upward his original estimate of one-year life expectancy for "Super Diamond."

He said the terrapin began to droop after two New York neurologists studied it, but hastened to deny they hurt it. They made motion pictures of its split personality, he said, apparently trying to see if it would yield any information of value about schizophrenia.

So far as he knew, no such information was obtained.

Youth Sentenced To 5 Years for 6 Housebreakings

A 20-year-old youth was sentenced to five years in the Virgina State Penitentiary yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court for six housebreakings which netted him $222.55.

Isaiah S. Higgins of Gum Springs, Va., pleaded guilty to the series of housebreakings which occurred during August and September at various county restaurants.

Judge Paul E. Brown sentenced him to five years on each charge, but ordered that the sentences run concurrently.

At the same session of court, Judge Brown revoked an 8-year probationary sentence given Rufus S. Sawyer October 9 for stealing a taxicab and robbing a man near Franconia.

Sawyer, 26, of 408 King st., Alexandria, was sentenced to serve the 8 years at the State Penitentiary on grounds he violated his parole by leaving the area without notifying the probation officer.

Judge Bentley Revealed as Seriously Ill

In Nursing Home After Nerve Surgery For Traffic Injury

Juvenile Court Judge Fay L. Bentley is seriously ill and may be away from official duties for "a long, long time," it was disclosed here yesterday, at her home.

The 51-year-old jurist was reported in a nursing home for absolute rest and quiet with a "nervous involvement," the aftermath of a traffic accident in 1946. Early this month she underwent nerve surgery at Washington Sanitarium, at Takoma Park, Md.

Municipal Judge Walter Casey, her assigned alternate, disclosed that the length of time he will serve in her stead is "indefinite."

Indicative of the seriousness of Judge Bentley's illness was word from her home that she could not see visitors, or even receive flowers or other tokens of sympathy. For that reason, a sister said, the name and location of the nursing home was undisclosed.

The sister, Mrs. Charlotte Jones, who has been living with Judge Bentley at their Georgetown home, 3412 Q st. nw., stid the judge had been removed from Washington Sanitarium to more quiet surroundings at the request of her physician, Dr. Vasilios S. Lambros, neurosurgeon.

Friends of the judge verified reports that she suffered what was believed to be a minor spinal injury in a traffic accident two years ago. After that, they said, she convalesced at the home of another sister, in Rockville, Ind.

Judge Bentley, who has served over the Juvenile Court here since the first of three six-year appointments in 1934,

Robbery Charged

Police last night arrested Melvin D. Hardy, a carpenter of 5015 Weaver ter. nw., and charged him with robbery after Thomas Carter, 44, of Rockville, Md., reported his wallet containing $46 was stolen from him earlier as he, Hardy and a third man were riding in a cab.

Lung Expert Engaged in Collapse Case

Dr. Edgar Davis Of GU to Consult With Glenn Dale Doctors on Error

Dr. Edgar Davis, chief of chest surgery at Georgetown University medical school, has been called in by District authorities as a consultant in the case of the woman whose wrong lung was partially collapsed in an operation at Glenn Dale Sanatorium.

Announcement of the engagement of a "top-flight chest surgeon from the District, who is working without fee, to consult with Glenn Dale doctors on the case" was first made by Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday afternoon.

Patient Is "Improved

Identification of Dr. Davis was given later by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, who termed the physician "outstanding" in his field. He said Dr. Davis made an examination yesterday and is expected to disclose the results today.

The woman "showed improvement" yesterday, hospital officials said, although her condition is still considered serious.

In the operation performed Tuesday by Dr. Frank Ashburn the right lung was partially collapsed although X-ray charts had determined the left lung as the one requiring the surgery. The operation had been scheduled for a week without anyone noticing that it was the wrong lung, it was reported.

Headed Bethesda Staff

Dr. Ashburn, who has been practicing here since October, received his medical degree from the University of Texas. He subsequently studied at the University of Minnesota, and the Mayo Foundation. Following his entry into active duty with the Navy, he made the highest mark on the class indoctrination examination at Bethesda Naval Medical Center and was sent back to the Mayo Foundation for additional research.

He served with the First Defense Battalion of the Marine Corps at Pearl Harbor for 18 months and later took part in the Marshall Islands landing. He received a citation and commendation there for setting up a mobile hospital surgical unit and constructing and running a hospital for natives. He returned to Bethesda and was on the chest surgery staff there for 3½ years, being head of the staff the last year. He is a diplomate of the American Board of Surgery which is the highest recognized attainment for surgeons.

Staff Shortage Cited

Meanwhile, Edward K. Funkhouser, executive secretary of the District Tuberculosis Association, called attention to the shortage of doctors at the hospital and the accompanying overworked condition of the staff.

Low salary scales and lack of housing at the hospital make it difficult to obtain qualified doctors, he said. At present the sanatorium s operating with little more than half the approved staff, although it is housing 575 patients, he said.

"Tragic as the error was, it would be even more tragic if we did not learn something from it," Funkhouser said.

"How the mistake occurred is inconceivable," he said, "but it did occur and preparations must be made to prevent any recurrence."

An enlarged operating budget which would provide funds to pay salary scales commensurate with the qualifications and experience of doctors needed for the staff would go a long way toward alleviating the overworked condition of the staff, Funkhouser said.

Wife Gets Lawyer to Defend Spouse in Miscegenation Case

By Richard L. Morris
Post Reporter

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 30.—The 19-year-old wife of Clark Council Hamilton, a Baltimore steelworker charged with violating Virginia's miscegenation law, came here Sunday and engaged an attorney to defend him, it was learned tonight.

T. Warren Messick, prominent Roanoke criminal lawyer, told The Washington Post he had been retained at the request of the wife, the former Florence M. Hammond, whom Hamilton married last May in Roanoke County.

A preliminary hearing originally scheduled for 10 a. m. Friday in Roanoke County - Trial Justice Court, is expected to be postponed until January 10, 11 or 12 at Messick's request, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Lejeune W. Chelf.

Hamilton's wife was said by an attorney who interviewed her, to feel that "her husband is a good man, better than any other husband would be."

She was said to believe that "if her husband had any colored blood, it is a very small amount," and she feels the attempt to break up their marriage "s all wrong."

The girl was quoted as having said she attended business school in Baltimore while her husband was working in order to get a job she now holds in a department store.

She reportedly came to Roanoke the day after her husband was arrested in Baltimore last Thursday to "see about getting a lawyer." Police said Hamilton, when apprehended, had told her to stay in Baltimore until he communicated with her.

The slightly built Hamilton, whose age has been given as 20 and 22, is being held in the white section of the county jail at Salem, 7 miles west of Roanoke

He was arrested in Baltimore last Thursday on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Ada L. Hammond, who lives in the Riverdale section of southeast Roanoke. Her daughter, Florence M. Hammond, was married to Hamilton in the Riverdale Baptist Church on May 22.

The warrant charges Hamilton with violating the section of the Virginia code that makes it a felony for Negroes and whites to intermarry.

Chelt had indicated earlier this week that he would ask for a continuance of the hearing himself if a certified copy of Hamilton's birth certificate did not arrive from Franklin County, Ala., in time for Friday's scheduled hearing. Chelf said he had not received the copy as of 6 p. m. today.

The commonwealth's attorney has a "verification of birth records" from the Franklin County health officer that says "Clark Council Hamilton, jr." is colored and was born July 4, 1928. On his marriage certificate Hamilton listed his age as 22, his color as white, and his birthplace as Elseredo, Calif.

If convicted, Hamilton faces a one to five-year penitentiary sentence.

Sen. Capper Gets Bi-Party Praise in Farewell Luncheon

Senators of both parties paid warm tribute to Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.), yesterday at a farewell luncheon in the Capitol.

Today's session will be Senator Capper's last in the Senate. He is retiring after 30 years as a Senator. The luncheon was given by the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations of the District.

Gordon Atherholt, president of the council, praised Senator Capper for his long record of legislative service to the District.

Capper is a former chairman of the Senate District Committee. He has continued to serve on the committee. He repeatedly sponsored legislation to give the District suffrage in national affairs. He is a coauthor of the Capper-Cramton Act under which large-scale land purchases for recreation and park development have been carried out in the Washington area.

Among those who joined in praising Capper's record of public service were Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), District Commissioner John Russell Young and C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the District Board of Education.

Vice President-Elect Alben W. Barkley and Senator Arthur Vandenberg, President pro tempore of the Senate, sent messages of greeting for Senator Capper and regret that they could not attend the luncheon.

About 50 persons were present. Guests signed a memory book to be presented to the Senator.

Restaurateur Calls Drunk Charge False

A restaurant proprietor yesterday charged that a policeman arresting him on drunk and disorderly charges would not listen when he tried to explain he was disheveled and had lost his glasses while "escorting" three loud-talking customers out of his place.

Declaring he had not had a drink on the day of his arrest, November 29, the restaurant man, Francis A. Fischer of the Hillcrest Grill, 2714 Good Hope rd. se., also told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board his repeated requests for a doctor at the Eleventh Precinct station were ignored. He wanted to prove he was not drunk, he said.

Fischer, who forfeited $15 collateral on the police charges, was testifying at a continued ABC hearing yesterday, having pleaded not guilty to ABC charges of using the licensed premises for "disorderly purposes" and failing to carry out ABC rules in good faith.

Other Complaints

The restaurant proprietor had other complaints against Pvt. Walter B. Zurowski, who, with Pvt. Chester Sczuka, had taken him to the station house. They had arrived at the restaurant in a scout car, in response to a telephoned complaint, a few minutes after the three obstreperous customers had been ejected.

He said he tried to get Zurowski to arrest the customers, one of whom had thrown a bottle at him and overturned a table as he scuffled to get them out, but the policeman paid no attention.

Furthermore, Zurowski would not listen to him when he asked him to let him get his glasses, which had been knocked off and without which he could see very little, and his coat, before he went to the police station, Fisher told the ABC Board.

Fisher's counsel, F. Joseph Donohue, told the board this pointed to "animus" on the part of the policeman.

Former Waitress Testifies

Mrs. Mary Burbage of 2330 Nicholson st. se., a former waitress at the Hillcrest Grill and an acquaintance of Pvt. Zurowski, testified that the policeman had told her on December 3 that he "would like to see Fisher lose his license for a month."

Privates Zurowski and Sqzuka had told the board on Tuesday that they saw Fischer "sweep everything off his bar on the floor," and that he was staggering and cursing, his clothes were disarranged, and broken drinking glasses were on the floor. Denying the cursing charge, Fischer said the rest of the conditions were due to his scuffle with the objectionable patrons.

While several Eleventh Precinct policemen had testified that Fischer seemed intoxicated when he was brought in, Austin Lawrenson, bartender at the Hillcrest Grill, said there was nothing unusual about Fischer's actions or appearance that evening.

Other witnesses testified to Fischer's good character, including several policemen from the same [illegible]

State Unlikely To Fight Racial Ban at Airport

Gov. Tuck Reported To Believe Virginia's Authority Is Limited

The State of Virginia is not expected to contest a recent controversial order of the Civil Aeronautics Administration abolishing racial segregation at the National Airport, which is located on Virginia soil but is owned and operated by the CAA.

Airport Terminal Services, Inc., which has the food concessions at the airport, has challenged the legality of the order. Its request for an injunction to prevent the CAA from enforcing the segregation ban will be heard at 10 a. m. Monday in the United States District Court at Alexandria, Va.

Although Frederick J. Ball, vice president and general counsel of ATS, said in his complaint that State laws apply at Government installations such as the airport, Gov. William Tuck of Virginia leans toward the view that the Commonwealth's authority over the airport property is limited to liquor sale regulation, gasoline taxation and process serving, it was reported.

Attorney General Studies Case

Virginia Attorney General Abram P. Staples was said to be looking into the matter and planned to discuss it with the Governor. A member of the attorney general's office said it was his own opinion that the State has no jurisdiction over the case.

CAA and National Airport officials continued yesterday to prepare detailed reports on the refusal of service to Negros at the airport restaurants since the order was made effective on Monday.

The legal case raised by the refusal of ATS to end segregation and by its request for an injunction will be handled for the CAA by Edward H. Hickey and Melvin Siegel, special assistants to the United States Attorney General, and George R. Humrickhouse, United States District Attorney in Virginia.

Meanwhile, Negro spokesmen indicated they would await the court hearing on Monday without staging demonstrations such as the "sitdown protest" made by Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, and his son, at the airport on Wednesday.

The District branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People commended the CAA order in a statement by the Rev. Stephen G. Spottswood, president, which called the ban "another victory in the field of civil rights in the Nation's Capital."

McGrath Set To Head D. C. Committee If He Is Asked

Will Not Seek Post, Senator Declares; Holland Interested In New Assignment

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) yesterday said he will accept the chairmanship of Senate District Committee if the job is offered to him, but he will not actively seek it.

McGrath said, too, he would be glad to continue to serve on the committee if the chairmanship goes to Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.).

Holland, however, told reporters his main interest now is to obtain membership on a second major standing committee. His only major committee membership now is public works. He has told Senate leaders he does not want his membership on the District Committee to interfere with an assignment to a second major committee.

Would 'Trade It Off'

Holland said of the District chairmanship: "I'm not seeking the post at all. I'd much prefer to trade it off for a position in a standing committee of general importance."

He said he plans to consult with members of the Democratic steering committee, which makes the initial assignments to Senate committees for its party.

"I have considerable interest in the District, and I want to see it well served," said Holland, "but I don't want service on the District Committee to deprive me of a place on another general committee."

If he continues on the District committee, Holland said, he would join in reintroducing the Washington home rule bill.

Holland is ahead of McGrath in Senate seniority. Holland was first appointed a Senator in September, 1946, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Charles O. Andrews (D., Fla.). McGrath entered the Senate in January 1947.

Former Governors

Each is a former Governor of his State. Each served throughout the Eightieth Congress on the Senate District Committee. Each favors home rule for Washington. Holland was a member of the Senate District home rule subcommittee. McGrath, in the Republican controlled Congress, was appointed by District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), to head one of the six District subcommittees, the one in charge of police, fire, and other public safety matters.

McGrath's position as chairman of the Democratic National Committee could be a factor in the decision on who is to fill the District chairmanship.

Outranking both Holland and McGrath in seniority on the District committee is Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), but he is in line to be chairman of the Postoffice and Civil Service Committee.

Johnston disclosed that he had heard some reports that an effort might be made to recall some former member of the District Commitee to head it. In such a move, Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.), might be a candidate for the chair manship it was said.

Hoey Due Here Today

Hoey is expected to arrive in Washington today. He served as acting chairman of the Senate District Committee for several weeks in 1946, during an absence of the late Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.), then chairman.

As acting chairman, Senator Hoey won approval for legislation for District-supported child day-care centers, against the outspoken opposition of Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (D., Tenn.) and others.

Senator Johnston, who has expressed his intention to continue as a member of the District Committee, said he had heard of no move to keep Senator McGrath from being chairman.

Other members said there had been reports of an effort to work a reverse-English purge to keep Senator McGrath from the chairmanship. This was an ironic turnabout of the postelection talk that Administration forces in the Senate might try to bar pro-Dixiecrat members from coveted chairmanships.

Area News in Brief

125 Trailer Families Face Eviction Soon

More than 125 families have been warned they may soon have to vacate their "glorified trailer" war housing at West Virginia and Montana aves., ne., unless the Government can renew its lease from the land owners.

The land was rented to the Government in 1944 by three private owners, the Safeway Stores, L. P. Steuart and Bro. Inc., and a Mr. Cassin. The buildings are owned by the Public Housing Administration, but managed by the National Capital Housing Authority.

The tenants were warned December 20 in a letter from John Ihlder, NCHA executive director, that they might face eviction. He said he wrote the tenants at that time to give them maximum notice, because he knew the Government was having trouble negotiating renewal of the lease.

The landowners wish to build on the property which is zoned for commercial use. Steuart said yesterday he had had plans to construct a truck terminal on the property ever since the war.

Alerted in $30,000 Theft

Area police were alerted yesterday for the occupants of a truck bearing North Carolina tags who are wanted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in connection with a $30,000 burglary of an Aulander, N. C., bank.

A waist high yellowish-cream colored safe, two to three feet wide, containing approximately $30,000 was removed from the bank about 5 a. m. yesterday, according to the lookout.

The truck was described as a wrecker with a green colored crane. The name "Charles H. Jenkins and Co." was painted on the side and the truck bore dealer's license tags.

15 Denied Raise

Fifteen civilian employes of the District National Guard are not entitled to the $330-a-year raise granted to Federal workers, according to a ruling of the Comptroller General's office.

District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton, who made the ruling public, said his office had earlier advised Guard officials that the workers were part of the District Government and therefore not entitled to the pay boost.

Apartments Readied

Thirty-nine one and two-bedroom apartments at Arlington Farms, Va., are being readied for occupancy late in January, by married Army non-commissioned officers of the first three grades on duty in this area, the Military District of Washinton announced yesterday.

These units are the first of 79 converted from the 600-room Georgia Hall and formerly used as a dormitory for female Government employes. The remaining 40 apartments will be ready for occupancy some time in April.

Bootlegging Charged

A man accused of selling bootleg corn whiskey was held yesterday in $500 bond for action of the grand jury at a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

He is Robert S. Dorsey, 22, of 1347 Wylie st. ne., who was arrested after an early hour raid by police on a rear room at 1379 H st. ne., on December 18.

Dorsey is charged with keeping, concealing and selling untaxed whisky.

Tax Advice Offered

Bethesda (Md.) residents puzzling over their income tax returns, may obtain the advice and assistance of a deputy collector of internal revenue who will sit in the Bethesda County Building January 4 and 5 from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., it was announced yesterday.

Guarantee Fund for Inaugural Already $22,445 Past Quota

The guarantee fund for the presidential inaugural has been oversubscribed.

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the finance committee of the 1949 Inaugural Committee, told finance unit members and other officials, meeting at Hotel Mayflower, that $222,445 has been subscribed to the fund so far.

In view of the late start of Virginia and Maryland, he declared, the fund may total $250,000. The original goal was $200,000.

Both he and General Chairman Melvin D. Hildreth paid tribute to the committee for raising the largest guarantee fund in inaugural history.

Fleming pointed out that while the intensive drive for funds is over, additional subscriptions will be welcomed from corporations, firms and individuals who have not yet contributed. Those who wish to participate should make their checks payable to Robert V. Fleming, chairman, finance committee, Riggs National Bank.

Hildreth emphasized that activities of the committee were planned "so as to be self-supporting and not to cost guarantors or taxpayers any money."

Earlier, James William Bryan, chairman of the public relations committee, announced several new committee members. They include: Gerard B. Dobbin, Richard Eaton, Frank Gervasi, Diana Hirsh, Hazel Markel, Judge Justin Miller, Nancy Osgood, M. R. Rogers, Eugene Thomas and Meredith Young.

Teachers Get Pupil View On Science

Honor science students of the Nation yesterday told science teachers assembled here what's wrong with their courses, and the student-eye view wasn't complimentary.

They found, they said bluntly, that their high school courses in science were, among other things: "Stereotyped;" old-fashioned;" "impractical." and "geared to the slowest thinker in the class."

What the students of today need more, they said, are "courses to encourage the brilliant student without discouraging the average;" "more up-to-date courses," and studies "that deal with things we all should know."

Their observations were given in panel discussions at Hotel Washington, in closing session of the annual convention of the National Association of Science Teachers.

Said Jacques C. Poirier of 4406 River rd. nw., of the University of Chicago: "Many high school courses are duplicated immediately in college. Brilliant students are forced to go along the treadmill with slow students."

The critics, numbering 15 and ranging in age from 15 to 23, are all past winners or near-winners in annual science talent search competitions. Most are studying under science scholarships.

Death of D. C. Man Struck by Train Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued late yesterday by Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg in connection with the death of Clarence Weaver, 40, of 5019 Nash st. ne.

Weaver, a laborer employed by the National Brick & Supply Co., was struck by an eastbound Baltimore & Ohio train yesterday morning as he was unloading a cinder car on the company's siding at Terra Cotta, D. C. The train, the National Limited, was coming into the Washington Terminal at the time.

The victim was pronounced dead on the scene by Dr. W. R. Strong of the Emergency Hospital staff.

Silver Spring Man Is Hit by Auto

Thomas A. Van Vliet, 54, of 8812 Reading rd., Silver Spring, Md., suffered head and right shoulder injuries last night when struck by a car as he crossed 14th and U sts. nw.

Van Vliet was admitted to Garfield Hospital in undetermined condition. Police listed the driver of the car as John T. McKann, 40, of 2000 Connecticut ave. nw.

Kerrmon Loretz, 37, of 316 P st. nw., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with head injuries after he was struck by a car at New Jersey ave. and O st. nw. Police listed the driver as William V. Johnson, 45, 2117 10th st. nw.

Candidates Hit Montgomery Voters' Apathy

Two candidates for the first elected Montgomery County Council yesterday scored apparent voter apathy to the forthcoming January 6 council election.

Candidate J. Douglas Bradshaw, pointing out the caliber of councilmen elected to administer the county's new charter may well be a decisive factor in its success or failure, warned that a small vote will mean "the true expression of the majority of the people will not have been achieved."

A Takoma Park attorney, Bradshaw is running for councilman from the Fifth District on a slate of seven candidates sponsored by the county charter committee.

Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park housewife who is running as an at-large candidate, also decried the lack of interest.

An active charterite, Mrs. Opal is running independent of the charter committee slate. She has been strongly critical of the charter committee's move in nominating a slate of only seven vandidates for the seven council posts, describing it as "selection, not election."

"An egotistical fear struck the charter committee directors right after our fine victory (when charter was approved last November 2)," she said.

"The psychological name for this disease is distrust of the people," she said. "This disease of not trusting the people is the main cause of the citizens' lack of interest in government."

Capt. John Callahan

Graveside services for Capt. John Callahan, 26, of Baltimore, Marine pilot who died Christmas Eve when his plane crashed near the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C., will be held at 11 a. m. today at Arlington Cemetery.

Capt. Callahan

Captain Callahan, a native of Baltimore, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in June, 1943. In 1945 he won the Silver Star Medal for shooting down three enemy planes during action over the Ryukyu Islands. He was also awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and four air medals.

Among those surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Doris Callahan of Santa Anna, Calif., daughter of Brig. Gen. Lawson H. M. Sanderson, USMC, and his father, John A. Callahan of Baltimore.

Mrs. Carrie P. Williams

Richmond, Va., Dec. (AP).—Mrs. Carrie Powell Williams, 80, widow of William Reid Williams, sr., Assistant Secretary of War during President Wilson's Administration, died here today.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Williams, a daughter of the late Prof. John Henry and Rebecca Leigh Powell, was born in Halifax County.

She married Williams on December 27, 1893. Williams died in 1931.

Mrs. Williams is survived by four sons, Dr. John Powell, Shirley Carter and William Reid Williams, jr., of Richmond, and Thomas Leigh Williams of Wilmington, Del.; a daughter, Mrs. Archibald Chapman Harrison of Washington; a brother, John H. Powell, the composer and pianist, and eight grandchildren.

Adm. Strauss, Mine Laying Expert, Dies

Admiral Joseph Strauss, USN (retired), who directed the laying of 56,000 contact mines in the North Sea during World War I, died yesterday in the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, after an illness of seven months. He was 87.

A striking combination of naval and scientific ability, Admiral Strauss specialized in naval ordnance. He designed the first heavy gun mount to be operated by electricity. He earned for himself an international reputation as an authority on high explosives.

Admiral Strauss was credited with development of the theory of superimposed turrets for battleships, employed in the old Kearsage and Kentucky, the forerunner of all big-gun battleships today.

For his conception and operation of the North Sea barrage, the vast minefield laid from Norway to the Scottish coast to close the road to enemy submarines, Admiral Strauss received the Distinguished Service Medal, and the Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George from the British government.

None of the fleet was lost in planting the mines and only one was blown up in sweeping them, facts which prompted Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels to describe the undertaking as one of "the Navy's great achievements."

Other decorations held by Admiral Strauss, who commanded the battleship Ohio and Nevada, and served as commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Fleet in 1921 and 1922, included: The Sampson Medal for his work during the Spanish-American War, the Order of Wen Hu, 1st class, of China, Commander of the Order of the Sacred Treasure of Japan, and Commander of the Legion of Honor of France.

Admiral Strauss is also credited with inventing the first spring-recoil gun mount used in the Navy, establishing the Indian Head Naval proving grounds, and designing the first disappearing mount for deck guns of submarines before the use of "wet" mounts was evolved.

The naval pioneer was born in Mount Morris, N. Y., in 1861. He was appointed to the Naval Academy from Virginia in 1881 and graduated with the class of 1885. He retired from active duty in 1925.

In addition to his wife, the former Mary Sweitzer of 2208 Massachusetts ave, nw., Admiral Strauss is survived by a daughter, Mrs. James Spear Taylor, Bethesda, Md.; a son, Capt. Elliott B. Strauss, USN., of Washington, and five grandchildren.

Mrs. Lena Goldstein

Mrs. Lena Goldstein, long-time resident of Washington, died yesterday in the Silver Spring Sanitarium after a short illness.

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Goldstein had lived in Washington for more than 40 years. She made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Steinberg, at 4214 16th st. nw.

She was a member of the Hadassah, United Hebrew Relief and Jewish Consumptive Relief Society.

Surviving, in addition to Mrs. Steinberg, are three sons, Charles Goldstein of 1344 Underwood st. nw.; Joseph Goldstein of California, and Irwin Goldstein of Florida, and five other daughters, Mrs. Mollie Romans and Mrs. Sarah Ferrow of California, Mrs. Florence Sutherland of Florida, Mrs. Anna Munsher of New York, and Mrs. Eva Rich of St. Louis.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 11:30 a. m. at the Bernard Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Adas Israel Cemetery.

Isidor Arenson

Isidor Arenson, 69, Washington tailor for 15 years, died yesterday at his home, 437 Decatur st. nw., following a brief illness.

Mr. Arenson, a native of Russia, came to the United States when 16, living in New York until he came to Washington. He had been active in his trade until the past few months. He was a member of the George Washington Lodge, Independent Order of Beth Sholem.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Fannie Arenson; two daughters, Mrs. Jeanette Bortnick and Mrs. Sylvia Lyons, both of Washington; a brother, Meyer Arenson of New York, and three sisters, Mrs. Pauline Beitler, Mrs. Sara Tannenbaum and Mrs. Lena Weiner, all of New York.

Funeral services will be held today at 1 p. m. at the Goldberg funeral home, 4217 9th st. nw. Interment will be in B'nai Israel Cemetery.

Mrs. Carter Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, 56, wife of Steward R. Carter, sr., who died Tuesday at her home, 5208 1st st. nw., will be held at 11 a. m. today at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 3d and A sts. se. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Carter, who had been ill for several months, was a sister of District Highway Director John N. Robertson.

A native of Washington, she was the daughter of James Palmer Robertson and Emily Pistoria Robertson. Members of the Pistoria family came to Washington about the time of the Civil War.

Mrs. Carter was a granddaughter of James W. Robertson, who was auditor of the Treasury Department in pre-Civil War days, and during the war became auditor for the Confederacy. A letter from President Lincoln, expressing appreciation of his prewar services, remains in the family.

Mrs. Carter was active in St. Mark's parish and diocesan activities, and served for several years on the Ladies' Board of Managers of Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital and chairman of the St. Mark's unit of that organization.

In addition to her husband and brother John, she is survived by a son, Steward R. Carter, jr., attorney, of Silver Spring, Md.; another brother, James Palmer Robertson, jr., Haddon Heights, N. J.; two sisters, Miss Lula M. Robertson and Mrs. Josephine M. Bourgeois, both of Washington, and a grandson, Steward R. Carter 3d.

Hollywood, Dec. 30 (AP).—Walter Morosco, 49, film producer and son of the late impresario, Oliver Morosco, died today.

Pictures he produced included "Margie," "Sentimental Journey" and "Wing and a Prayer."

Morosco was married three times. He was divorced in 1934 from Corinne Griffith, star of the silent screen; in 1944 from Shirley Listen-Walter, a socialite, and in 1947 from Marie O'Keefe.

Sergt. Welling Rites Are Held At Fort Meade

Funeral services for Sergt. Lester Welling, of Hampton, Va., who was killed December 7 while on duty with a United Nations truce team in Palestine, were held yesterday in the chapel at Fort George G. Meade, Md. Burial was in Arlington Cemetery.

Sergeant Welling was killed with another soldier in a jeep accident on the road between Kalundia Airfield and Jerusalem.

A combat veteran of the Twenty-ninth Division, Sergeant Welling was serving on the faculty of the Second Army Food Service School at Fort Meade when he volunteered for special duty in the Holy Land.

Attending the funeral, in addition to members of Sergeant Welling's family and soldiers from Fort Meade were Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, commanding general of the Second Army; Col. O. C. Mood, deputy chief of staff; Col. C. H. Gerhardt, chief intelligence officer, and Col. Barlow Winston, quartermaster, of the Second Army, and Myles Standish of the U. N. Washington Information Center, representing the Secretary General of the United Nations.

Sergeant Welling is survived by his wife, who lives in Hampton, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nevis L. Welling of Baltimore.

Oldest Watch Plant In U. S. Faces Crisis

Waltham, Mass., Dec. 30 (AP).—Three court-appointed trustees sought bank loans today to save the jobs of 2300 workers in America's oldest watch-making plant.

The century-old Waltham Watch Co.—unable to meet debts or finance impending 1949 operations—may close New Year's Eve if the loans are not obtained.

The company filed a reorganization petition under the national Bankruptcy statutes Tuesday. The trustees were then appointed by Federal Judge George C. Sweeney.

Attorney Daniel J. Lyne, one of the trustees, said their most pressing problem is the lack of "immediate available funds even for payrolls."

The trustees are seeking private capital, he added, to avert the scheduled layoffs. They arranged meetings today with bankers who said they were not too optimistic about the outlook.

The trustee conferred with Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials yesterday to discuss a possible nine million dollar loan, which would take care of the firm's long-range problems.

Lyne said he thought Government funds might be forthcoming within a few weeks and he expressed optimism "for the long haul."

He said funds could be made available immediately to keep employes on the job if the court approved issuance of trustee certificates—a device used in certain cases for raising capital quickly.

Walter W. Cenerazzo, president of the American Watch Workers Union (Ind.) said such a plan would make unnecessary closing of the plant for "a single second."

Business Decline in '49, Plunge in '50 Predicted

Cleveland, Dec. 30 (AP).—A New York life insurance company executive told a meeting of the American Statistical Association last night that a 1949 business decline is in prospect.

Donald B. Woodward, vice president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., said:

"This decline will be sufficiently limited so that most Americans will know of it only from their newspapers and not from personal experience."

But in the following year, he added, the downward move will assume serious proportions.

New Congress Gets Warning

By the United Press

Framers of the Taft-Hartley law told the new Congress yesterday that it must choose between a continued ban on the closed shop and "complete Government regulation" of the internal affairs of labor unions.

That warning was contained in a 110-page defense of the law published as its Republican sponsors prepared to yield control of Congressional labor committees in the Eighty-first Congress to its Democratic critics.

The group also released a 61-page study of union welfare funds but made no specific recommendations. It said the health, welfare and retirement plans now in force could serve to promote sound labor relations but that they had not always been used for that purpose.

Issued by a majority of the joint House-Senate Labor Committee created by the Taft-Hartley law, the report will provide a handbook for its defenders in fighting the Administration drive to repeal the act and to write a milder substitute.

Freight Rate Boost Granted

The railroads yesterday won temporary freight rate increases amounting to about 425 million dollars a year.

They said they needed this money—and more too—to meet higher material and labor costs.

The Railway Express Agency's revenues also got a boost yesterday. The ICC authorized the company to put into effect nationally its so-called Western scale of rates. The Western rates are about 10 per cent a hundred higher than the Eastern-Southern scale.

Here are the temporary increases granted the railroads:

Within Eastern and Southern territories and between those territories (east of the Mississippi River), 6 per cent; within Zone 1 of Western trunk-line territory (Iowa, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota), 5 per cent; Western territory other than Zone 1, 4 per cent; between territories other than Eastern and Southern, 5 per cent.

Pan American, Union Agree

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—Pan-American Airways and 4000 mechanical employes early today reached a tentative agreement for a 10-cent hourly general wage increase.

The agreement, subject to union membership approval, came about after an all-night session.

Other contract provisions included health plan changes, personnel advancement and weekend time off, according to a company spokesman.

Chicago, Dec. 30 (AP).—Woodruff Randolph, president of the AFL International Typographical Union, today advised the union's 87,000 members it may be necessary to extend the 4½ per cent strike assessment beyond February, 1949.

The union membership voted the assessment last February to finance ITU strikes against 48 newspapers in 29 cities in the United States, Canada and Alaska. Included is the strike of the Chicago Typographical Union, Local 16, with 1500 members.

Trial of 8 in Gandhi Murder Ends in India

New Delhi, India, Dec. 30 (AP).—The trial of eight men for the murder of Mohandas K. Gandhi ended today—just 11 months after the assassination. Special Judge Atma Charan said he would pronounce judgment in January.

WAVE Killed By Propeller

A 28-year-old WAVE was killed instantly about 8:30 a.m. yesterday at the Anacostia Naval Air Station here when she walked into a whirling propeller of a four-engine B-24 bomber.

She was identified as Marie P. Kelly, yeoman third class, who was returning to her station at Pensacola, Fla., from leave spent in New York and Philadelphia.

She appeared at the air station here Wednesday seeking a ride, according to a public information officer, and when unable to obtain one returned yesterday.

She obtained space on the bomber and was boarding the plane, crouching a little as she walked from the rear under a wing, when struck on the left side of her head and body by the propeller.

Foremen, Checkers Vote To Work in Seattle

Seattle, Dec. 30 (AP).—AFL foremen and checkers voted today to return to work on Seattle's waterfront.

The action, announced by State Federation of Labor President E. M. (Ed) Weston, cleared the way for reopening of the Seattle port this afternoon.

Jack Benny Faces Added Tax Of $2.08 Million in Show Sale

By the United Press

The Internal Revenue Bureau is ready to hand out some bad news—financially—to radio comedian Jack Benny who switched his "incorporated" radio show from NBC to CBS at a prospective three million dollars profit.

It was revealed yesterday that on Monday the bureau will rule that Benny's four million dollar CBS deal is subject to $3,080,000 in personal income taxes instead of a capital gains levy of only one million dollars.

That would leave Benny a $920,000 profit instead of three million dollars he stood to make.

The ruling will not mention Benny specifically because use of his name under the Revenue Act would be unlawful. But it was made known that the comedian already has been advised of it by letter.

Predicts He'll Be Unhappy

A bureau spokesman refused to comment on the decision. Asked if Benny would be "unhappy," he replied:

"I should think he would be."

Treasury officials say the capital gains theory of tax savings has been getting a "thorough going over" by persons of means, particularly in radio's upper brackets. Revenue officials are considering each case individually and each claimant must satisfy the bureau that he actually is selling real property and not just "personal services."

Charles Correll and Freeman Gosden, creators of "Amos 'n' Andy," were among the first in radio to use the capital gains idea. They sold all rights to their program to CBS for a reported $2,000,000, signing separate contracts to play the character roles at regular salaries.

Bing Crosby, Bergen May Lose

Sale of the program was taxed as a capital gain—at the 25 per cent rate—with Correll and Gosden keeping $1,500,000. Their salaries are taxed as regular income.

As for Benny, the bureau reportedly found that the "corporation" he set up has only the comedian's personal services as assets and therefore that he cannot legally claim a capital gain by selling himself.

Other top-flight NBC stars reportedly approached with similar capital gains deals include Bing Crosby, Edgar Bergen, Fibber McGee and Molly, and Phil Harris and Alice Faye. If made, each would be considered on its own merits.

Monopoly Laid To Fag Firms

By The Associated Press

A congressional committee reported yesterday that testimony has revealed "a remarkable picture of increasing monopoly control" in the tobacco industry.

The House Small Business Committee said witnesses told it that "three companies virtually control the American tobacco industry, principally with three brands of cigarettes."

The committee named the firms as the American Tobacco Co., with Lucky Strike; Liggett & Myers, with Chesterfield, and R. J. Reynolds, with Camel.

In a formal report, issued after a country-wide investigation, the committee said: "These three companies, according to witnesses, do over 86 per cent of the cigarette business, and they each have leading smoking and chewing tobacco brands which similarly dominate those fields."

The committee proposed "that the Federal Trade Commission should be directed to make a study of the feasibility of requiring important cigarette manufacturers to divest their smoking and chewing tobacco business from their cigarette business."

Admiral's Wife Slugged

ADMIRAL AND MRS. KINGMAN

Los Angeles, Dec. 30 (AP).—A gunman today pistol-whipped the wife of Vice Admiral Howard F. Kingman, USN (retired), 58, after she slapped his face during a robbery attempt.

Police said Mrs. Kingman and her husband were about to enter their car, parked in the downtown section, when another car with three men drove up. One of the trio, flashing a gun, got and and tried to rob the couple.

"Why you infamous pup," Mrs. Kingman exclaimed and slapped the gunman in the face. This so maddened him, she told police, that he slugged her about the arms and face with his gun.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 30, Loves Her Husband Yet Resents His Sweet Nature and Hates Every Person He Likes; Can She Grow Up Emotionally?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it too late, at 30, for a woman to grow up emotionally? I am married to a wonderful man who takes life as it comes, and so far as I know he has never let hatred of any kind enter his life, whereas mine seems to be based on it.

I grew up an unwanted child, dominated by a neurotic possessive mother; and a few months after her death I met and married Tom. We have been married for almost three years and in most respects it has been a very happy marriage; that is, happy so long as we are alone together and I don't have to share him with anyone else, and this aspect of my behavior bothers me greatly.

I am extremely jealous of Tom and let my imagination run riot; anyone he shows interest in becomes a target of my hate. He tries to reason with me, but this only adds fuel to the fire, and I resent his goodness when I am so full of hate and distrust.

Life Is Joyless, Plagued by Fears

IT'S COME to a point where I am afraid to meet his friends, for fear I will do or say something that will hurt Tom and brand me the jealous fiend that I am. I feel inferior to all his women friends, when in reality I am not. I know I am their equal and yet I insist upon tearing myself apart to prove to myself that I'm not.

Each time that I behave badly I promise myself it will be the last, but it never is; and I am so miserable at times that I feel I can't possibly go on living, plagued by hate, fear and distrust. I love Tom so much that I'd do anything to make him happy, but I'm simply not strong or wise enough to cope with myself unaided. So please help me find some hope that I can become a better, more mature person.

G. E.

Woman Is Growing at This Writing

DEAR G. E.: The only person who can't grow, emotionally, in adult years, is one who obstinately refuses to admit the possibility that many of his difficulties in human relationships are self-generated; and who rigidly insists, instead, that the other fellow or society in general is the "enemy" of his happiness.

As a matter of fact, your letter gives evidence that you are growing, painfully, right now. We find this evidence (1) in your expanding acute awareness that your jealousy of Tom, resentment of his amiable goodness, and your free-floating hatred of others are rooted in a complex of self-despising impulses; also (2) in your urgent desire to control these negative feelings.

There is potential health of mind and character implicit in that honest, open, constructive approach to the problem; and your stricken confession that you can't cope with yourself unaided recalls a proverb to the effect that it's a wise man who knows his limitations.

Get Understanding of Undercurrents

WHAT YOU need is expert deep therapeutic help in ventilating by free discussion the destructive emotions felt, so that you may examine them objectively, in cooperation with understanding counsel, in order to see (1) what percentage is composed of "blind" rage or fear, seeping from a hidden reservoir of childhood hurts, and (2) what splinters of literal justification for rational indignation exist, in your current dealings with grown-ups.

Emotional poise isn't a matter, as you may mistakenly think, of being invariably "sweet" tempered or blessedly free at all times from anxious, defensive, hostile stresses. Rather it is a by-product of learning to use one's head; of being realistically alert to "what's going on" in one's feelings, when disturbed, and deciding, with a moment's thought, whether the agitation refers to appropriate cause for speaking-up, or whether the immediate situation or somebody in it has triggered-off a train of explosive memories.

By your own admission, you carry such a chain of explosives into all your personal relations, and any aimless word, glance or move may start fireworks in your bosom that don't make sense in the actual present circumstance. However, "repression" isn't the solution; further, it's impossible. Understanding is the route to salvation. Even as Scripture says, "With all thy getting, get understanding."

Eleanor Young and Officer to Wed

Col. John S. E. Young, USMC, and Mrs. Young entertained at a tea on Wednesday to announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor, to Capt. Jesse Vernon Booker, USMC, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Booker of Arlington, Tex. Captain Booker is attending the Marine Corps School at Quantico, Va.

Miss Young is a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dorothy Baldwin Becomes Engaged

At an informal "at home" last evening Mr. and Mrs. James W. Baldwin of Bethesda, Md., announced the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Jane, to Eugene R. De la Croix, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. De la Croix, also of Bethesda.

Miss Baldwin attended Maryland State Teachers' College, Towson, Md., and her fiance attended George Washington and American Universities.

Upper Marlboro Debutante Makes Washington Bow

A Maryland girl made her bow to Washington society when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Hall of Upper Marlboro entertained yesterday at a reception at the Washington Club for their daughter, Miss Josephine Slingluff Hall. The debutante was also presented last June at the Baltimore Country Club at a dance attended by Washington and Baltimore debutantes.

Christmas decorations and flowers filled the rooms of the Washington Club yesterday. Coffee and punch and tall drinks were served from a buffet in the dining room, and the guests were received in the white-paneled drawing room by Mrs. Hall and her daughter.

The debutante wore a white net gown, very bouffant, embroidered in pearls and rhinestones in flower and butterfly design. Her flowers were an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and blue forget-me-nots. Mrs. Hall was gowned in blue net embroidered in blue steel beads and tied with American Beauty velvet sash. Her dress was pinned at the shoulder with American Beauty camelias.

Miss Hall's assistants for the afternoon were Miss Leslie Ann Smith, Miss Madge Smith, Miss Brooke Stiefel, Miss Marianna Brooke, Miss Sally Zantzinger, Miss Mittie Forbes and Miss Muffin MacArthur. Friends of Mrs. Hall who took turns pouring coffee were Mrs. James Montford, Mrs. Hampton Magruder, her sister-in-law; Mrs. Robert Lee Hall 3d; her daughter-in-law, and Mrs. Charles Stiefel.

Young Set Frolics At Old-Fashioned Barn-Type Dance

Members of the younger set attended an old-fashioned square dance last evening at Pierce Hall in Georgetown. Hosting the party were Miss Mimi Mackall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Mackall, and Douglas Stenhouse and his sister, Miss Edith Stenhouse, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stenhouse.

The orchestra consisted of piano, fiddle, accordion and guitar. Throughout the evening, ginger ale and orange ice quenched the thirst of lively dancers. Christmas decorations of garlands and bows brightened the hall. Gentlemen came in blue jeans and overalls, and girls in crinolines and cottons were dressed in their best.

Dancing began at 9. A dinner was given beforehand by Miss Ann Wigglesworth. Those at the dance included Miss Nancy Mann, Miss Eleanor Kenney, Miss Nancy Leverich, Miss Louise Perry and Miss Elizabeth Miller. Also, Max Truitt, Michael McCabe, William Brawner, Charles Coleman, David Granger, Robert James Coote, Meredith Price and Charles Warner.

Admiral's Daughter Entertains

Home from Wellesley, Miss Joan Fechteler, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. W. M. Fechteler, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her home at the old Naval Hospital. Her guests included a number of young friends on holiday from various schools.

Miss Rebecca Anne White and Miss Florence Walker were guests, as well as Miss Jocelyn Arundel and Miss Betsie Bassett. Others were Miss Frances Haynes, Miss Evelyn Harman, Miss Adrian Dunn, Miss Constance Logan, Miss Mary Louchheim, Miss Anne Hoagland, Miss Elizabeth Lucas, Miss Cornelia Bingham, Miss Pola Fotitch, Miss Pat Frohman, Miss Gertrude McGinnes, Miss Jean Parker, Miss Genevieve Ruffner, Miss Patricia Ruppert, Miss Nancy Abbott, Miss Helen Adams, Miss Peggy Anderson, Miss Betty Sager, Miss Patricia Warden, Miss Barbara West and Miss Marcia Lee Wolf.

Miss O'Connell, J. J. Leveroni Are Married

Miss Catherine O'Connell and John J. Leveroni were married December 29 in Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown, at 10 a. m., the Rev. Hugh M. McCarron officiating. Mrs. Leveroni is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. O'Connell of Washington, and her husband is the son of Mrs. Frank Leveroni and the late Judge Leveroni of Boston, Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin appliqued with lace, and a veil of illusion held by a lace bonnet. Her flowers were white lilacs and she wore an heirloom brooch, a wedding gift of her maternal grandmother.

Miss Mary Ellen O'Connell was maid of honor. The other attendants were Miss Edith Mann Moses, Miss Martha Ryan and Miss Ann O'Connell.

Frank Leveroni of Boston, Mass., was best man. The ushers were Richard Fitzgerald, Melvin Shaelck and John O'Leary.

Mrs. Dugger Gives Dance for Daughter

Mrs. Greene W. Dugger gave a small tea dance yesterday at her Georgetown house to entertain the young friends of her daughter, Miss Mary Anne Dugger, and her son, Lieut. (j. g.) John Atterbury Dugger. Miss Dugger is home from her studies at Wellesely College and her brother is down for the holidays from his station at New London, Conn.

S. Africa Envoy Is Host Tonight

The South African Ambassador and Mrs. Harry Andrews will entertain at a South African Old Year's Night party this evening at the embassy. Guests will include members of the South African colony in Washington and the embassy staff.

The South African Ambassador-at-large, Charles Te Waters, and Mrs. Te Waters, earlier visitors in Washington, have returned for a brief stay and will attend the party.

Drapers Announce Birth of Daughter

A daughter, their second child, was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Franklin Draper on Friday, December 24 at Doctors' Hospital in New York.

Mrs. Draper is the former Miss Barbara Natalia Cagiati, daughter of Mrs. Francesco Cagiati of New York and Rome. The child will be named Francesca.

Bethesda Bride

Bessler

Mrs. Stewart Young became a bride on December 27 at the Bethesda Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. James S. Albertson officiating. Mrs. Young is the former Miss Matilda Gregory Norfleet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William James Norfleet of Bethesda. The bridegroom, an Army lieutenant, is the son of Mrs. Hector Stewart Young and the late Judge Young of Marion, Ohio

Winkin', Blinkin' and Nog

They Egged Us On Into Printing This

By Lucia Brown

What say the bells that ring on New Year's Eve?

Around The Washington Post they're telephone bells and the callers are usually asking for eggnog recipes!

Lots of people, apparently find, just in the nick of time, that they are short on one important item needed in making New Year's potion—the directions.

* * * *

So we're printing herewith our recipe for eggnog, a fairly elastic one that we hope will please our readers—and their guests. It comes to you with the best of wishes for good health, good cheer, peace and prosperity in 1949.

EGGNOG

6 eggs
3 cups milk
1 cup cream
6 jiggers whisky, brandy, rum, or sherry
Grated nutmeg

Separate eggs. Beat yolks until very light, then beat in sugar thoroughly. Add liquor, a little at a time, beating after each addition. Next add milk slowly. Beat egg whites light. Beat cream. (If whipping cream is used, beat until whipped. If coffee cream is used, beat until frothy.)

The choice as to which you use is yours, depending, of course, on how rich you like your eggnog. Fold egg whites and cream together, then fold both into yolk mixture. Chill in refrigerator, preferably overnight, and serve with sprinkling of nutmeg on top.

Both bourbon and rye are used in eggnog, though bourbon is possibly more favored for this purpose. Using part whisky and part brandy is advocated by some expert eggnog makers, while others advocate combining whisky, brandy, and rum in the nog.

Admiral and Mrs. Clark Feted by the Dale Millers

Miss Summerlin Presented

Debs' Parties Racing Grim School Summons

THE DEBUTANTE whirl swings on through the week with parties each day until the back-to-school movement looms up next week.

Yesterday Miss Harriott Summerlin of New York was presented to society by her aunt, Mrs. Summerlin Stevens, at a tea at the 1925 F Street Club. Last night Mr. and Mrs. Monte Appel's daughter, Jacqueline, made her debut at a ball at the Sulgrave Club. And at a tea at the Washington Club yesterday Miss Josephine Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Hall, jr., of Upper Marlboro, Md., made her bow.

Miss Summerlin's heritage in Washington goes back to her grandfather, the late George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol. She is the daughter of the late John Vandergrift Summerlin, and of Mrs. Otto Marx of New York, who with Mr. Marx, is here for the party.

The debutante was presented to society in New York earlier this season. She is a graduate of the Madeira School at Greenway, Va., and is now a student at Smith College. Mrs. Horace Smith, mother of the hostess, was on hand yesterday to help her daughter, and taking their turn at the tea table were Mrs. Benjamin Smith, Mrs. Frank McCoy, Miss Ursula Buckley, visiting Mrs. Stevens from England; Mrs. Pierre Beauregard and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel.

Miss Summerlin's gown was of aqua satin, made with deep round neckline and cap sleeves and a full skirt ballerina ength. Mrs. Stevens wore wine red changeable taffeta wth ankle-length skirt.

Mr. and Mrs. Appel entertained at a small dinner for their daughter before the dance, with Miss Joan McGeoch of New York, and Miss Anne Dickenson of Princeton, classmates of the debutante at Bryn Mawr, among the guests. Also here is Miss Jane Coleman of New York, whose engagement to William Draper Blair, jr., was recently announced. Sidney and his orchestra played; white and pink spring flowers made a fairyland setting for the party and green smilax trailed up the stairway. Mr. and Mrs. Appel and their daughter stood before a lattice screen laced with sprays of ivy and other greens, as the 400 young people drifted in around 10:30.

Miss Appel—Jacquie to her friends—was charming in white nylon tulle, the skirt made of several layers of tulle caught up at the sides in pannier effect to show rows of tiny ruffles of tulle. The tight bodice was fashioned with dropped shoulder sweetheart neckline.

Her only jewel was a diamond and pearl ring which had belonged to her paternal great-grandmother.

Mrs. Appel's gown of brown lace was made with a panel back with cascade drapery at the sides. She wore a corsage of small pink camellias. Assisting her sister was Miss Patricia Appel, debutante of two seasons ago, who wore a pale green taffeta faille frock, the tight bodice edged about the off-shoulder neckline in rhinestones, the skirt made with bustle back. Her corsage was of brown orchids.

Among other parties given for the debutante this season was the dinner by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke before the debut ball of Miss Frances Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKee Dunn.

Miss Hendrick Eustis entertained at a dinner before the Appel dance in honor of Miss Jocelyn Arundel, a debutante of the season. Guests included Miss Betsy de Sibour, Miss Claire Delattre-Seguy, Miss Juliette Gill and Miss Carol Bradley.

The young gentlemen were Frank Harmon, Hugh Morris, Charles Howze, jr., Charles Davies Olmsted, Nicholas Philip, Gordon Linke and Archibold McGlasson, jr.

Sub-debs Dance at Columbia

Little Sisters Get In on the Fun

Sub-debs came in for their share of holiday fun at a dance given Wednesday evening at the Columbia Country Club. Hosting the party were Dr. and Mrs. Earle Griffith Breeding and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Arthur Kerwin. Honor guests were their daughters, Miss Carvel Hynson Breeding, a student at Mount Vernon, and Miss Lynne Redgrave Kerwin, who attends Madeira.

Some of the debutante group as well as post debs were at the party. Sidney's Orchestra played from 10 p. m. till the small hours. A supper was served shortly after midnight from a buffet centered with desert holly and white candles.

Carvel Breeding wore a lovely American Beauty satin dress. Her corsage was a black lace fan pinned with American Beauty roses. Miss Kerwin complemented her in white bouffant with a corsage of red carnations. Both Mrs. Breeding and Mrs. Kerwin were in black lace and wore orchid corsages.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Creighton and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Prye assisted. Dinner parties were given beforehand by Mr. and Mrs. Mark Merrell in honor of their daughter, Miss Julie Merrill, and Mr. and Mrs. John Yesair of Bethesda.

Mr. and Mrs. John Price Wetherill 3d entertained at dinner for the Misses Helen and Amie Willard at the Chevy Chase Club Wednesday evening, guests going later to Virginia Warner's debut dance at the Sulgrave Club. The honor guests made their bow to society on Tuesday.

The company included Miss Frances Haynes, Miss Ruth Saul, Miss Agnes Dunn, Miss Evelyn Harman, the Misses Julia and Frances Davidson, Miss Jane Walsh, Miss Jocelyn Arundel, Miss Louise Leahy, Miss Laura Winslow, Miss Beatrice MacArthur, Miss Virginia Weatherill, daughter of the hosts; Miss Carolyn Young, who is visiting Miss Weatherill; Miss Katherine Miles, Miss Joan Ryan and John Ryan, house guests of the Misses Willard. Wasn't '48 Something?

...And a Happy (Allowing For Gamma Rays and Stray Guided Missiles) New Year

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

Reprinted from January issue of Promenade by Special Permission

Whither 1949? ? ?

MORTALS here below, exposed to weird atom bombardment, curious jet maladies, Soviet invective and uncharted hazards of a new New Deal, greet 1949's advent with understandably mixed emotions. In the Nation's Capital, where Eleanor's blue gives final way to Bess' dusty rose, the first rousing inauguration in 12 seasons brings military marchers from far-flung outposts; lures Democrats, reconverted Republicans, patronage-hopeful Dixiecrats, Progressives, to jig the Pennsylvania ave. bandwagon. And as statesmen hooray, White House workmen rout our First Family to neighboring refuge. In Manhattan, while stocks skitter, Deweyites post-mortem, best dressed like Wallis, Mona, Thelma sweep serene in stoles, shirred lampshade dresses set off with turquoise gems aigretted chapeaux and close-shorn tresses.

Hollywood Story Pretty Sad

OUT Hollywood way, cinema economies avalanche, obliterating small stars, though sparklers surfeit in welters of high-carat geegaws, undergrown autos, litters of bluely mutatious mink. Meanwhile, Hedy, a Delilah in peacock feather cover-little, shears Samson Mature's hair-do; Fred and Ginger, kilted and burr-ing, bowleg through a highland fling and Grandma Marlene rates an Oscar for skilled technique at babysitting, her brilliant new role. On bright-lit Broadway, Ray leaps higher, Ethel yawps louder, Tennessee writes gloomier as Dorothy and Howard squabble through a second series of Days. Television's amateur quiz sessions add new horror to everyday life which the air waves retrieve with Eleanor's and Anna's ladylike cross-continent chatter. Prophets, having hit bottom, stay there. Astrologers, horoscopists craftily shift zodiac signs from elephant to ass. After a too-brief moment Columnists Walter, Marquis, Joe-Stewart, Drew and Mark switch from crow to crowing. Publishers Arthur, Henry R.; William Randolph and Whitelaw, after beating breasts, discover Harry some fun to kid. Pollsters Gallup, Roper, Crossley, dead-ended, languish, '49's forgotten men.

Winnie—And New Champion

WARTIME biographies taper, leaving Winnie's pen mightier. Across Pacific, despite Bullitt's battle, China, the Gissimo, once again slip down drain. Greek guerillas continue hopscotching from peak to peak; Athens cabinets change swifter than Olympian lightning. Behind the Iron Curtain, Stalin-Tito slug it, prettily applauded by kibitzers Vyacheslav, Ana and Andrei. Throughout la belle France, Charles, expediently cordial, pats infants, smacks stubbly male cheeks as sure route to power. In Palestine tommy-guns pop, bombs bang as Israelis, Arabs crawl over dusty desert, take round-corner potshots to dismay the U. N. Below Equator, Evita, adding a new diamond service stripe, struggles to elevate her impoverished gauchos.

Everywhere jets leap through the sound barrier, rockets pierce the stratosphere, steaks and chops gaily follow suit. Rents stay put, taxes rise. Latin America could use loans, every European capital is bust. What further calamities, what further joys 1949 will bring, no one knows. A happy, happy New Year!

DON'T DO

... Parting is such sweet sorrow ...

DON'T DO

... Revenge shall be mine ...

DON'T DO

... Oh, joy unconfined ...

MELODRAMA VS. REALISM—How to talk and act effectively is suggested by Miss Frances Crowley of Emerson College, Boston, in a picture interview at a joint meeting of the American Speech and Hearing Association and the American Educational Theater Association. "Overacting" is fine at the outset to develop the students, Miss Crowley says, but after that, melodrama becomes so much "ham acting." Restraint can be more effective, she insists

Truman 'Talked Himself In,' Speech Specialists Are Told

President Truman "talked himself into the Presidency of the United States," members of the Speech Association of America were told yesterday in a panel discussion on "1948 Campaign Speeches."

The speaker, former Congressman Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.) addressed one of 14 section meetings which rounded out a three-day joint convention of the SAA, the American Speech and Hearing Association, and the National Educational Theater Association, held at Hotel Statler.

Truman's campaign proved those who said speaking could not mold public opinion were wrong, Randolph said.

The former Congressman said Truman "made mistakes in fact and tact," but that the American people considered the "candor and courage" of the President's speeches more important and forgave his "rough and ready oratory."

Randolph, now teaching at Southeastern University, called Truman "a man who acquired the new look in his public speaking early in 1948." He cited the Young Democrats' dinner in May, 1948, as the start of the President's hard-hitting, off-the-cuff speeches.

Harrison B. Summers of Ohio State University told the same meeting that candidates' radio personalities, rather than issues as such, decided the outcome of the 1948 campaign.

Speaking to an SAA section meeting on "Speech and the Liberal Arts" Paul F. Douglass, American University president, said he was "not too enthusiastic about education for any political purpose."

"A society which produces sensitive, understanding, communicating, responsible and expressive persons in their own right will be freer and stronger than any generation of adepts indoctrinated with a zeal for democracy by a feeble division of the United States Office of Education or by the backwash from the Department of State's voice outside America," Douglass declared.

The university president suggested that colleges "leave Demosthenes in Greece" and teach young people how to speak distinctly, enunciate and pronounce clearly with proper oral grammar, express thoughts simply in straightforward words, and read aloud.

Dr. Douglass said a good speech teacher can produce an individual "equipped to make society effective by the everyday exchange of experience in the everyday situations of living."

History Group Told of 1848's Effect on Jews

The impact of the revolutionary events of 1848 upon European Catholics and Jews were discussed at two separate sessions of American Historical Association members at the Mayflower yesterday.

The three-day meeting of the association and affiliated societies, attended by some 1300 educators and scholars, closed with a bus trip to the Naval Academy.

"Since the wind of the century is blowing toward Socialism," Dr. Gordon Griffiths of the University of California said quoting Abbe Bazin, an early leader of Christian Socialism, "it is therefore urgent that we ourselves should also form a social school."

The leaders of the Catholic Socialist movement could not agree with the more radical methods of Karl Marx and aimed for "conversion" of the capitalist to regulation, rather than "expropriation and class struggle," Griffiths declared.

Forerunner of Democracy

This Catholic Socialism was an early forerunner of modern Christian democracy, he said as he cited the influence achieved in modern Italy by the Christian Democratic Party and its French counterpart, MRP (Mouvement Republicain Populaire).

Another speaker, Dr. George A. Carbone of the University of Mississippi described how the Christian Socialist movement in the France of middle nineteenth century was caught between revolutionary Socialism on one side and conservative Catholicism on the other.

"Forced to choose," he said, "the Christian Socialists cast their votes with the conservatives and committed political suicide."

Dr. Ross J. S. Hoffman of Fordham University, discussing the British Whig Party rapprochement with Pope Pius nineth in 1847, observed that 'since the French revolution, each great crisis threatening or engulfing the great republic of Christendom with war and revolution, has drawn the British Empire and the papacy toward diplomatic entente."

Early Anti-Semitism

"Before 1848, most leftist groups were anti-Jewish," Dr. Salo Baron of Columbia University told listeners at a session discussing 1848 and the Jews.

"They had identified Judaism with the spirit of capitalism," he declared, adding that the ideas of the left-wingers changed when they saw Jews die at the barricades fighting for revolutionary ideals.

"They (leftists) began viewing the Jewish question from a different angle," Baron asserted. "They learned for the first time that there were Jewish proletarians."

In describing 1848 as the year in which European Jews first became active politically on the Continent, Baron observed: "The status of the Jew may be considered the barometer of liberty in any country."

Sectional Benefits

The Jews in France derived benefits from the revolution there in 1789 but these benefits did not extend to the great mass living elsewhere in European ghettos, he pointed out.

Dr. Bertram W. Korn of Hebrew Union College traced the careers of several of the 26 Jws who fled to the United States to avoid persecution for their role in the 1848 struggle abroad.

One of them, he said, Frederick Kneffler, became a brigadier general in the Union Army, leading two Indiana regiments in the charge up Missionary Ridge in the Chickamauga battle.

Another fought with the Confederates as a colonel; while others entered the professions and the marts of trade.

U. S. Doctors' Age Drops Years Since '40 to 44 Average

Chicago, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—The American Medical Association reported tonight the average age of U. S. doctors has declined by about a year.

It said the average age of the 199,745 doctors now is 44.4 years, whereas in 1940 it was 45.8 years.

The A.M.A. said this reflects the "relatively large number of physicians trained since 1940."

The United States now has a doctor for every 710 persons, the A.M.A. said, a proportion better than any other country except Israel, which has many refugee physicians.

Utah has the youngest doctors, with a median age of 40.5. Arkansas has the oldest doctors, with a median age of 55.2.

Miss Montgomery Hostess

Miss Peggy Ann Montgomery entertained a group of college friends Sunday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Montgomery of Chevy Chase. The party was after dinner. Eggnog was served, and there was dancing and carol singing. Miss Montgomery attends Mount Vernon Junior College.

Ask Anne — Foods That Go Best With Eggnog

I am planning a late afternoon eggnog party for a dozen or so intimate friends. Of course, there will be other beverages for those who do not care for eggnog. But I want to concentrate mainly on the eggnog and whatever else goes with it. What else can appropriately be served with eggnog? I had in mind either fruitcake or a very delicious spice cake that I have access to, but I just don't know if they do well together. A READER.

Fruitcake is a traditional accompaniment for eggnog. Or, your own spice cake could be used instead. If you wish a more substantial lunch you could add tiny chicken sandwiches, salted nuts and candies.

A week or so ago I read an article on cleaning paint brushes. Somehow the paper got away from me and, believing it was in your column, wondered if so if you would write it again. M. L. McL.

We did recently mention that paint brushes could be cleaned by first softening the paint by soaking the brushes in turpentine or varsol. Also, there are several good paint-brush cleaners on the market which are sold where paints are sold. It is not always possible to completely remove paint when it has been allowed to harden in the brush.

A sugar cookie recipe I saw recently calls for ½ teaspoon double-acting baking powder. What brand of double-acting baking powder do you recommend? What baking powders are double-acting and what is the meaning of "double-acting"? L. W.

We do not use trade names in this column, but baking powders which are "double-acting" are plainly so marked on the label. Double-acting baking powders are so called because they start the rising process before the product is placed in the oven and continue it in the oven. To do this two types of leavening, one which works when the product is cold and another which works when heated, are found in double-acting powder. If a baking powder is not clearly marked "double-acting" it is a tartrate or phosphate baking powder, neither of which have the so-called double-action.

How do you clean beige pigskin gloves? L. W. P.

If the gloves were sold as washable, you can clean them with soap and water. Place the gloves on your hands, working a little extra mild soap or castile soap into the soiled spots at the ends of the fingers and cuffs. Now, wet in lukewarm water and rub your hands together, working the soiled spots. When clean, remove from hands, turning inside out as you do so. Wash inside of gloves. Rinse thoroughly and turn right side out. Shape and puff out fingers by blowing into them. Pat with paper towel to absorb as much moisture as possible. Stuff fingers and hand lightly with paper tissues and place where they will dry quickly, but away from heat. When almost dry, work gently with the fingers to soften.

How can I remove a persimmon stain from colored material? L. W. P.

Pouring boiling water through the stain from a height of two or three feet probably will remove it, if the material has not been washed. If this doesn't completely remove it, moistening it with liquid shampoo and rubbing between the fingers may do it. Let the shampoo stand on the stain for an hour to soften before rinsing it out. Do not use soap, for that will set the stain. If this doesn't completely remove it either, try a diluted household bleach, but be sure to test the effect of the bleach on the color at an inconspicuous spot before applying it to the stain.

Something put on a linen dresser scarf has caused some white fuzz to adhere to the top of my mahogany dresser. Could you advise how to remove the fuzz? I tried washing the mahogany, but with no results. A. G.

The object which made the stain probably was hot, causing the finish to soften and when it became hard again the fuzz was imbedded in the finish. To remove it, rub the marred area with powdered pumice and oil. Dip a soft cloth in the oil, touch it to the pumice and rub with the grain, confining the pumice just to the stained area. When the white fuzz has been removed, wipe away all pumice with a clean cloth dipped in oil and polish the entire surface with a furniture polish or wax. A mahogany-stained wax available at auto supply stores would be excellent for this.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Late Hours and the Young

Not too many years ago, teenagers who came home after midnight were considered to have been in some pretty serious mischief. Parents made a big issue of the matter. Neighbors gossiped. The whole family worried. Today, in most communities, the situation has changed. There's a different attitude.

Yet many of us still worry. We carry over from an earlier day the conviction that youngsters should be home before we go to bed. We worry and fret. Sometimes we insist that our youngsters leave parties before the others do.

If we have done a good job of raising our young people, if we have given them opportunities to make decisions, to stand on their own feet increasingly, by the time they are in their mid-teens we ought to be able to trust them. If we do, they will be willing to "play the game" with us. They'll phone if they are delayed beyond the hour when they expected to return. They'll be reasonable about over-many late hours and they'll continue to talk over with us what has happened.

But if we insist on the hours of our youth we can expect only unpleasantness, unhappiness and perhaps defiance.

Mrs. Roosevelt Declares Pegler Can't Hurt Husband's Fame

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt thinks her frequent critic, columnist Westbrook Pegler, is "such a little gnat."

Pegler declined comment. He frequently has referred to her as "Eleanor the Great."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her description in answer to the following question:

"You have three big, strong American men as sons. Why do they not horsewhip Westbrook Pegler?"

She replied:

"I have four sons, not three 'big strong, American men as sons.' Why should they bother, however, to horsewhip a poor little creature like Westbrook Pegler? They would probably go to jail for attacking one who was physically older and perhaps unable to defend himself. After all, he is such a little gnat on the horizon.

"He cannot touch my husband's memory. Deeds, not words, count in this world, and thousands of American citizens answer such attacks as Mr. Pegler's out of their own experience with love and loyalty in their hearts which remain untouched by Mr. Pegler's diatribes."

Anthony F. Pilches Now Residing Here

Now living in Washington are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Felix Pilch, who were married Thanksgiving morning at 9 a. m. in the Chapel of the Holy Comforter. Mr. Pilch is completing his studies at George Washington University.

Mrs. Pilch is the former Miss Dorothy Lois Frazer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Everett Frazer of Chester, Ill., and Mr. Pilch is the son of Mrs. Mary Pilch of Peckville, Pa.

African Tribe Rejects White Bride as Queen

Johannesburg, South Africa, Dec. 30 (AP).—Seretse Khama, who will one day rule 100,000 tribesmen in Africa, was on his way to London tonight with his people's verdict that he must choose between his throne and the white woman he loves.

The tall 27-year-old tribal heir who married an English girl without his people's consent must now tell her the Bamagwatos do not want a white queen.

Back in Africa on the tribal carpet, neighboring chieftains told Khama that his people still want him for ruler, but not with a white wife by his side.

(In London, Khama's bride said she wouldn't talk until she heard all the details from her husband. Previously she had said: "My one hope is, that I can go back to Bamangwato and help him rule.")

Khama also will talk things over with the British colonial office, as Bechuanaland is a British South African protectorate.

It is the custom of the tribe that the women do all the farm work. The British girl would be expected to set an example as the chief's wife by toiling harder than the others in the broiling tropical sun.

If she visited the Union of South Africa with her husband, she would be up against the rigid color bar. She could not stay in white hotels, eat in white restaurants, or travel in white trains.

Mother Again Faces Loss Of Her Child

For the second time in less than six months, Mrs. Anna Majerska, 38-year-old waitress, is threatened with the loss of custody of her daughter, Janet, 5, for allegedly cruel treatment.

She also faces another danger—revocation of the probation granted her last July after she had been sentenced to a jail term.

She wept yesterday when she appeared in Municipal Court before Judge George D. Neilson.

"I sing to her, buy her nice toys and try to be nice to her," she said.

Beatings Alleged

Last July, Mrs. Majerska was first before Judge Neilson. A policewoman testified how she had found Janet at home, her back covered with black and blue marks. She said the child told her the mother had beaten her with a stick.

On that occasion, Judge Neilson sentenced the woman to 10 days in jail. But after two days, he relented and suspended the remainder of the sentence, placing her on probation for one year.

Now, as the result of a new incident, Joesph Sanford, chief probation officer of Municipal Court, has recommended that the court revoke Mrs. Majerska's probation and return her to jail.

Separation to Be Asked

Sanford told Judge Neilson yesterday, that both the Women's Bureau of the Police Department and the Board of Public Welfare will ask Juvenile Court to separate the child from her mother and place her in a foster home as a ward of the board.

Judge Neilson delayed action for two weeks on the request that he revoke the probation, pending outcome of the case in Juvenile Court.

"This mother is being punished sufficiently in this most tragic and complex case," he commented.

Sanford testified his office received a psychiatric report on Mrs. Majerska, indicating she is psychoneurotic in her attitude toward the child.

U. S. Aide Says

Stay Ending For Blonde In Suit Here

The Washington Post
ELFRIEDE HALMSCHLAGER
Brings suit

The Viennese blonde who is suing a married wartime Army colonel here for breach of promise has overstayed her welcome in the United States.

The assertation was made last night by an official of the local field office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The official, who declined use of his name, said 'it has been determined" that the "temporary stay" of Miss Elfriede Halmschlager, 33, a former Austrian government worker, has "expired." He added:

"An application for an extension has been refused. Steps are being taken to require her departure from the United States."

He said the woman, now employed as a cosmetics' salesperson at a local downtown store, has been "notified" that she must leave and will be given a "reasonable" period of time to comply.

The spokesman said the thin, blue-eyed Austrian was informed that her time limit was up prior to the time she filed suit in District Court for $325,000 from Fernando T. Norcross, 57, of 4420 Hawthorne rd. nw. She charged in the suit, filed Wednesday, that Norcross is the father of her 2-year-old daughter, Elizabeth.

Earlier, the woman told a reporter she thought she would be permitted to remain in this country for another three or four months. Her child, she reported, is being cared for in a nearby nursery school.

Manassas Link Is Sought to Shirley Hwy.

Construction of a highway from Manassas, Va., east to the new Shirley Memorial hwy. was recommended in a committe report last night to the Northern Virginia Planning Commission.

Since only 5 of the commission's 18 members were present, action on the report was held up until the next meeting.

Committee Chairman Leroy E. Peabody said the road could serve as one link in the proposed Monticello hwy. from Washington to Charlottesville. He said the road is needed now to connect Manassas and southern Fairfax County with Washington.

As recommended, it would go east from Manassas through Clifton, Fairfax Station, Burke, and Springfield, and would meet the Shirley hwy. about a mile south of Lincolnia.

Peabody said this road would cut 6 miles off the present route from Manassas to Washington and would furnish direct connections between the four smaller towns.

The commission was invited to a meeting, January 13, at Mannasas to discuss the future of the State vocational school, owned by Prince William County and operated by the State as a regional school.

Wheatley M. Johnson, member of the Prince William County Board of Supervisors, said the State has served warning it will withdraw its support of the school unless the counties involved share in its ownership.

'48 Lynchings Totaled Two, Tuskegee Says

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 30 (AP).—A white man and a Negro died at the hands of lynch mobs in the United States in 1948, Tuskegee Institute said today. Both were in Georgia.

The death of another Georgia Negro was listed as a "borderline" case because only two white men took part. At least three must be involved before a slaying is recorded as a lynching at Tuskegee.

Nineteen more Negroes were threatened by mobs during the year but were saved by law officers, the report continued. Fourteen were in Mississippi, two in Alabama and one each in Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia.

Tuskegee records show at least one death from mob violence every year since 1882, ranging from 231 in 1892 to one lynching in 1945 and 1947.

The report identified the 1948 victims as William H. Turner, Meriwether County, Georgia, and Robert Mallard, Toombs County, Ga.

The "borderline" case, Tuskegee said, was the killing of Isiah Nixon, at Alston, Ga., on September 8. Nixon was reported shot to death by two white brothers when the Negro "insisted on voting in Georgia's primary election after being advised not to do so."

Listed incidents in which mob action was averted included:

Danville, Va., Aug. 15—Charles Price taken from Danville to undisclosed jail because of danger of mob.

Arrest of Man Called in Tax Case Ordered

Arlington Trial Justice Hugh Reid issued a bench warrant yesterday for arrest of Kenova O. Karns, 2712 S. Washington st., Arlington, on a charge of failing to appear in court to explain why he hadn't filed his State and local tax returns.

Karns was tried in absentia yesterday and fined $50 and costs on the charge. He also had failed to show up in court Wednesday.

A $20 fine on the same charge was levied on Abraham J. Spero, 2955 S. Columbus st., Arlington, who was in court yesterday but who had failed to appear Wednesday.

Spero, who had filed his returns and paid his taxes prior to yesterday's hearing, pleaded guilty to the charge after complaining about the "multiplicity" of taxes he had to pay.

Out of 33 similar tax cases that have come before the Arlington County Court to date, 24 persons have been fined $20 but the fines were suspended; two were fined $50; two others were fined $20; four cases were nolle prossed, and one case is to come up today.

Reno 'Quake Exodus Ends

Reno, Nev., Dec. 30 (U.P.).—The exodus of earthquake-jittery Reno visitors ended today even though minor tremors still shook the divorce capital and touched off scientific speculation that "a big one" was in the offing.

Two seismologists, eyeing instruments that still recorded tremors four days after the first hit Reno, agreed any increasing intensity of shocks might foreshadow a major earthquake.

The biggest shock rocked the city at 4:54 a. m. (PST) yesterday. Afterward a few hundred persons left the area, a survey indicated.

Check Out of Hotels

Yesterday morning, women with fur coats thrown over night clothes lined up in the lobby of a big downtown hotel to check out.

Most of the 30,000 permanent residents and habitues of the numerous gambling casinos were apprehensive and puzzled by the continuing tremors coming on the average of every 30 to 45 minutes.

Hardened gamblers accustomed to the jiggling after approximately 100 separate quakes, reshaped their tottering stacks of chips and kept up play at the roulette wheels, dice games and 21 boards.

Prof. Vincent Gianella, seismologist at the University of Nevada, and Franklin P. Ulrich, chief of the seismological field offices, United States Coast and Geodetic survey in San Francisco, said that a continuation of strong shocks might mean a sharper quake was coming.

Helena 'Quake Recalled

Ulrich recalled the Helena, Mont., earthquake of 1935 which registered thousands of shocks. The Helena quivers kept getting stronger until they resulted in a temblor that did widespread damage.

Einstein Set For Operation

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—Prof. Albert Einstein, 69, will undergo an abdominal operation within "the next day or so."

Dr. Morris Hinenburg, executive director of Brooklyn Jewish Hospital, made the announcement today.

Einstein, Nobel prize-winning physicist, entered the hospital several days ago for a checkup.

Dr. Rudolf R. Ehrmann, a friend of Einstein's and a specialist in internal diseases, said the operation was not for a malignant condition, but to correct a "long-standing abdominal condition." He did not amplify.

Ehrmann said he visited Einstein yesterday, and he "looks perfectly well and feels quite well."

The operation will be performed by Dr. Rudolf Nissen, a former professor of surgery in Berlin.

Fliers' Return Is Delayed

New York, Dec. 30 (U.P.). — A heroes' welcome for five of the airmen snatched from a Greenland icecap and two of the officers who rescued them was postponed 24 hours today when the men were unexpectedly delayed. They are to arrive at noon Friday.

The seven men were due to arrive at LaGuardia Field shortly after noon, but the Air Force in Washington said they apparently had not yet left the base at Bluie West 1 Greenland, where they were taken immediately after the rescue.

"We don't know what is delaying the men," an Air Force spokesman here said. "Maybe they are pressing their uniforms or maybe the doctors ordered them to take another day's rest."

No Trace Seen Of Lost Plane

Miami, Fla., Dec. 30 (AP).—Search for a missing DC-3 charter plane with 32 persons aboard was extended today but the Coast Guard reported "negative results."

Gusty weather hampered the widespread search somewhat. The plane was lost on a flight from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami two days ago.

Seven Air Force planes searched the Bahamas area where a ship reported sighting a flare.

A rumor yesterday that survivors had been sighted on the coast of Cuba proved unfounded, the Coast Guard said.

HUSBAND AND WIFE OPPORTUNITY
You and your wife will find this very interesting if you read it carefully and THINK.
Could you be persuaded to hire a maid to cook your meals, make your bed and tidy up the house—or even get a "baby sitter" to take care of the children so that your wife can be free to assist you in making from $8,000 to $20,000—according your joint ambition, your INTEREST and ACTIVITY—during 1949?
Could you not afford a maid and/or a "baby sitter" if you had an income like that? Are you interested in that kind of money? Would your wife give you her support in a program that would assure both of you such an opportunity?
Do you have a car? (If not how are you ever going to get one, unless you can increase your income?) If you do have a car, would you not find it pleasant and probably a little romantic to leave home each morning with your wife beside you, and have her work with you, and encourage you, and assist you in a clean, profitable, permanent business arrangement?
Age is not important. Ambition is important.
There is no substitute for an open mind; without it you can neither grasp nor handle a new thing, or a new opportunity.
If you ever intend to do something big—NOW is the time to do it.
Do not allow the address to disturb you. Apply in person at 7:30 o'clock sharp, Monday evening.
3710 New Hampshire Ave. N.W.
BRING YOUR WIFE WITH YOU in good faith, and you will be treated accordingly.

THE DISTRICT LINE

By Bill Gold

Stockholders Probably Voted for Him

Mrs. D. L. Detwiler of Herndon, Va., raises a questioning eyebrow over our afternoon contemporary's recent article about a new Congressman. In part, it stated that:

"He was quietly ruining his hosiery mill when friends urged him to enter public service."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Seven-week-old female puppy." (Georgia 7831 after 10 a. m.).

"Thoroughbred German shepherd; beautiful, but too high strung for small home; needs farm environment." (Wisconsin 3966).

"Beautifully marked gray and white female cat; also 3-month-old kitten." (Michigan 2032 after 6 p. m.)

"Pedigreed female fox terrier, 1 year old." (Warfield 5189 or Hobart 4733.)

NOT GUILTY

Mrs. T. M. Lyon of 329 Emerson st. nw. tells a heart-warming story of a motorist who emerged from a department store to find a policeman getting ready to write out a ticket for his car.

The charge? "Parking too far from the curb."

"But aren't we allowed 12 inches?" asked the motorist. The cop nodded, and answered: "Yes, but you're more than 12 inches away."

"Oh, no I'm not," protested the motorist as he whipped out a measuring tape. "Look."

The tape showed 9 inches, and the motorist beamed in triumph. The policeman scratched his head, and went off mumbling to himself.

NOT AT THESE PRICES

Walter Haight, our rotund race expert, occasionally takes time out to study the human race. (He thinks people are quite important, because without them there would be no Maryland half-mile season).

Walter reports on a puzzling bit of research he recently conducted in the A & P store at 6428 Georgia ave. nw.

A woman was buying a turkey, and the butcher was just about to chop off the turkey's legs when his cleaver was stopped in mid-stroke by a sudden outburst from his customer.

The arrested cleaver wavered uncertainly as the butcher replied, "3 minutes to 12."

"Yipe," cried the woman as she wheeled and dashed from the store. "Watch my cart. Hold that turkey. I'll be back," she yelled over her fast-disappearing shoulder.

Our Mr. Haight clocked her in 11-flat for the furlong, and nodded approvingly. But he couldn't understand what had happened.

Neither could any of the other startled customers, until the woman returned, about 10 minutes later, with a smile of triumph on her face. Noticing the inquiring glances of all about her, she made a public explanation:

"I had a cake in the oven. It was supposed to come out at 5 minutes to 12."

It was evident from the faces of her audience that the explanation had failed to click. A mere cake should not have caused that much commotion.

Sensing the situation, the cake-baker resumed her place before the meat counter, and added one last thought:

"It wasn't the cake so much —it was just that I had nine eggs in the danged thing."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I deliver The Washington Post, and I have a gripe to voice.

Why don't motorists dim their lights for bicycles, as well as for other cars?

I deliver most of my papers before dawn, and am frequently forced to stop and wait for autos to pass, because their headlights blind me.

It's not only annoying, but dangerous. And it seems to me that the safety of a kid on a bike is just as important as the safety of an adult in a car.

So I ask: Why don't motorists dim their lights for bicycles?

Betty Jean Porter,
Berwyn Heights, Md.

Dear Betty Jean:

Probably because kids on bikes don't have strong headlights of their own, with which to enforce such courtesy.

Maybe your reminder will help. Bill.

DID SANTA REMEMBER?

Mrs. Robert A. Cruise of 608 Oak Haven dr., Falls Church, Va., reports that her 4-year-old son, Bill, had a memorable Christmas.

When he got up that morning and saw all the wonderful toys that Santa had brought, there was great excitement in the Cruise household for a while.

But when little Bill settled down for breakfast, he grew pensive — and when Mommy asked what he was thinking about, Bill replied earnestly:

"I was just wondering whether that little girl got her two front teeth."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Sid Herzig, the screenwriter, saw a pair of stone lions which caught his fancy. He bought them and placed them in front of his home in Beverly Hills. A few days later, when h returned from an afternoon drive, he noticed something strange about the entrance to his home. "I knqw what it is," said Herzig to his son, "the stone lions are missing." He immediately reported the theft of two stone lions to the Beverly Hills police . . . His son suggested that they tune in their shortwave radio and listen to the police broadcasts of the theft. Herzig listened, and heard the police-call: "Calling Car. No. 17. Proceed to . . ." he heard his address, followed by: "Upset writer. Tell him something."

When Beatrice Lillie was taken to Doctors Hospital, a nurse made her comfortable and then kept telling her the name of the doctor who would attend her. "I know my doctor's name," replied Miss Lillie. "After all, this is Doctors Hospital—and NOT the Snake Pit."

Abe Attell, the former fight champion and tavern owner, is related to Dick Reynolds of Reynolds Tobacco, one of the wealthiest young men in America. Attell's stepdaughter, Marianne O'Brien, is the wife of Dick Reynolds . . . Attell, who has been known to gamble now and then, told his friends that whenever he is scheduled to visit Reynolds his family first removes from his clothing all playing cards, dice or other gambling paraphernalia with which he possibly might interest his wealthy son-in-law. "They won't even let me carry any loose change in my pocket," sighed Attell, "because coins can be flipped."

George Oppenheimer was the coauthor of "The Adventures of Don Juan" and Vincent Sherman was the director. Sherman cut and altered so much of the script that at the Warners Bros. studio the picture is referred to as "Sherman's March Through George" . . . Mrs. Florence Hubbard, who won $23,000 in prizes by identifying Jack Benny as the walking man on the "Truth or Consequences" program, collected the last of her prizes this week—a free holiday trip to Sun Valley.

I see that imaginary Fairy Godfather of yours hasn't made it snow yet, Barnaby.
No. But he's working on it.
M'boy, I've decided to call in an expert consultant on this problem of snow for your sled. Mainly because I don't want to overdo it, you know, like last year—
Huh?
Yes. And there was 1888 too, when I intended only to bring on a flurry or so, and, er—But never mind—
Here's our expert—
How are you, Jackie?

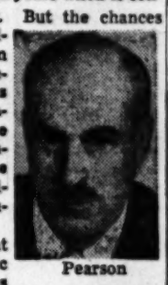
President Pro Tem Poses Problem

By Drew Pearson

The world's greatest deliberative body will have some of the liveliest new Senators in years when it convenes Monday. But the chances are its President Pro Tem will be a reactionary who has as much in common with the Truman Administration as the National Association of Manufacturers.



Pearson

That's what the Democratic secret caucus today is about—the race between cantankerous Senator McKellar of Tennessee and elegant Millard Tydings of Maryland, both ardent has-beens, to be President Pro Tem of the Senate.

Both have campaigned covertly but energetically for the job. When McKellar, who formerly held the post, heard Tydings was in the running, he sent a letter to other Senators saying he "would esteem their action very much" if they elected him.

Tydings, not to be outdone, dictated a letter of his own, proclaiming that "eight or ten" colleagues wanted to nominate him.

"While I am not personally soliciting support for this position," he continued blandly, "I am taking the liberty of bringing the above to your attention. In the event my colleagues feel me worthy of the place, I shall do my best to discharge its duties in the interest of the country and our party."

McKellar's Lapses

Ordinarily McKellar would inherit the job as a matter of seniority, since he held it before. But the gentleman from Tennessee, who refuses to reveal his age, had unfortunate lapses of mind when presiding over the Senate two years ago. Once, while wielding the gavel, he asked Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle, "When does the Senate meet, Les?"

Meanwhile, Tydings of Maryland, who voted against more Roosevelt policies than any other Democrat, arouses no enthusiasm in the breast of most colleagues. So they hope statesman-Senator Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming may be persuaded to let his name be submitted as President Pro Tem.

Note—One important bone of contention in this tug-of-war is that the President Pro Tem has the use of a long, sleek chauffeured limousine—free.

GOP Leaders Differ

While the Democrats battle over their Senate leaders today, the Republicans caucus Saturday. Several GOP liberals want to oust the conservatives.

Michigan's elder-statesman Vandenberg, mentioning this point to Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican Senate leader, said:

"I think we need a change of faces."

"It's a good idea," replied Senate Leader Wherry, "I'll be glad to step down if you and Taft step down."

Vandenberg, however, demurred. It finally developed that what Van really meant was that Wherry was to step down as GOP Senate leader in favor of Millikin of Colorado, while Vandenberg and Taft were to continue in their jobs.

Second in importance to Harry Truman's reelection is a problem to be influenced this weekend by one of the most important gentlemen in Washington—Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Sam has got to help decide who is going to be on the House Rules Committee—otherwise known as the House "bottleneck committee"—which has the power to kill almost any bill introduced in Congress. Upon the membership of this committee largely depends whether Harry Truman can carry out his profuse election promises to the voters.

Most people don't recall it, but last winter Sam Rayburn was not at all in love with Harry Truman. Neither was the new Vice President, Alben Barkley. For Truman had committed the unforgivable sin of not calling in his congressional leaders for nearly three months. Naturally they were burned up.

Rayburn Backs Friends

However, Sam Rayburn is not one to hold a grudge. His faults are in the opposite direction. He carries friendship so far there is almost nothing he won't do for a friend. When the Justice Department's Criminal Division recommended prosecution of Representative Gene Cox of Georgia in connection with the transfer of a radio license, Sam used his persuasive powers with the then Attorney General Francis Biddle. Cox was never prosecuted.

Cox therefore is still on the Rules Committee, where he prides himself on being a better Republican than any other GOPer.

So is Representative Howard Smith of Virginia. Both are Dixiecrats. Both worked against Truman's reelection.

And the big question is: Will Sam Rayburn put Administration policy ahead of of friendship and bar his two Dixiecrat cronies from this key committee which can largely make or break Truman's legislative program?

At 12 Tonight

Tonight at 12 o'clock we end . . . Another year on earth . . . And only God and we can tell . . . What it was really worth . . . The books are closed and there will be . . . A balance sheet tonight . . . To debit and to credit us . . . With every wrong and right . . . Perhaps we made mistakes and we . . . Have reason to regret . . . And there may be a lot of things . . . We wish we could forget . . . Or we have had a perfect year . . . And we may be content . . . With all of our accomplishments . . . And how the time was spent . . . But there is always one more year . . . To choose the right from wrong . . . If God will keep the earth intact . . . And let us live that long.
